What Schwab Says
What Hays Says
A Good Poem
Don't Teach Brutality
—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

Charles M. Schwab says the Germans are beating the Allies in industry. "Germany can put a ton of steel in England at $20 a ton cheaper than England can make it, and is sending pneumatic tools to Detroit. We used to ship such machinery to Germany, sold it cheaper than she could make it."

Mr. Schwab says "Germany is ahead of all Europe in production." He concludes that labor "can be paid only what labor earns." Very true, but that isn't the whole story. It is true that in Germany labor is really working hard. It is also true that in Germany profiteers are put in jail, not whitewashed, or praised as patriots.

Some men in this country, worrying about the high price of labor and planning to cut it down, would be worrying about the small size of a prison cell if they were in Germany. In the Chicago stockyards they save the tail of the ox and sell it. They also pay attention to the ox's body. Profiteering in this country is the body of the industrial ox. Labor is only the tail.

Mr. Hays, postmaster general, made a good speech to newspaper publishers yesterday. He promises that the postoffice will further develop mail delivery by flying machine. This country ought to have 10,000 first-class flying machines, trained men to run them, able to change from mail carrying to dynamite carrying in war, if necessary. That is the way to prevent war and to realize the wish expressed by President Harding yesterday that no American battleships might ever again fire a cannon.

Hays says the postoffice will not consider labor a commodity. That is important, when the biggest employers of the country are trying to make of labor the cheapest possible commodity, while keeping up prices on their own products.

Mr. Hays had interesting news for office robbers. He has given 16,000 automatic revolvers and some riot guns to postoffice employes. The orders are "shoot to kill."

Mr. Hays preached a good sermon on optimism, reciting a little poem called "Perspective," written for Cyrus H. K. Curtis. A colored gentleman seeing a railroad for the first time looking way down the track, then back at the wide locomotive, decided that the locomotive wouldn't be able to go far because the rails kept getting closer together.

The moral of the poem is, Don't be fooled by perspective and don't worry about something far off. When you get there you will find the rails far enough apart.

If there were room here to print all that Hays said about the postoffice statistics you would realize that this is a pretty good country. For instance, one postoffice in New York city handles twice as much mail as the whole of Canada. To this you may add that one single Hearst newspaper in New York uses more than twice as much newsprint paper as is used by all the newspapers in Canada.

Two or three hundred editors that listened to Hays asked each other solemnly, "What is the matter with business?" Answer: Suppose you owned the biggest jewelry store in town and woke up to find that everybody on your books had gone bankrupt. You wouldn't expect to sell much jewelry for awhile. The first thing to do would be to help your customers get on their feet.

Europe is the customer of the United States. Europe is half bankrupt, and its money is worth little or nothing. The first thing is to get Europe started that Europeans may buy. Harding and Hughes are working at that.

One thing stands in the way. Germany has got to pay, and those that conquered her are trying to invent some scheme that will keep Germany from making money and at the same time enable her to pay tens of billions of gold dollars. That isn't easy.

A well meaning judge suggests that the only way to stop highway robbery is to restore the whipping post and whip the highwaymen.

It would not work. You can't reform criminals by setting them the example in brutality. They used to saw men in two—lengthwise, and cut out their tongues for blasphemy. They broke them on the wheel, just casually to get information from them. That didn't make them any better.

If you restore the whipping post why not restore red-hot pincers, the boot, the rack and the human bonfire? Let all that stay buried in the museums. Steady justice, free from panic, will take care of the criminal, who is alway mentally and usually physically defective.

RIOTOUS SCENES AT INQUIRY

Men and Women Jeer and Cheer as "L" Probers Try to Silence Niland

Scenes of disorder marked the Elevated inquiry before the Griswold committee today and made it necessary to clear the room and temporarily suspend the hearing.

Two hundred spectators and witnesses, including women, alternately cheered, jeered and shouted "outrage" while Chairman Griswold pounded in vain for order.

After the excitement ended State House attaches declared it was the most riotous public meeting held on Beacon Hill in years.

The storm broke over the attempt of Chairman Griswold to stop former Representative Thomas A. Niland of East Boston from talking.

Griswold gave Niland ten minutes to speak, to which Niland objected.

When the ex-Representative had talked for fifteen minutes Griswold tried to suppress him, whereupon the disorder set in, with Niland, Wendell Phillips Thore, Mrs. Frank Page, Whitfield Tuck and others clamorously demanding that he be allowed to go on.

After the room had been cleared by messengers from the sergeant-at-arms' office the committee remained in executive session for ten minutes.

When spectators and witnesses were readmitted Chairman Griswold announced Niland would be allowed to speak, if he would confine himself to the matter in hand. But Niland had disappeared.

Niland was on the stand for a time yesterday and the trouble began today as soon as Griswold announced he would be given only ten minutes.

"I protest. This is an outrage," said Niland.

He then demanded a poll of the committee. "You will speak ten min-

Free Speech Upheld in Connecticut

Hartford, Ct., April 29.—Free speech is still free in this more or less free country.

Authorities cannot censor speeches in advance or determine what persons may or may not exercise the privilege of free speech.

The Connecticut Supreme Court so decided in the case of McAlister Coleman of New York, convicted in the New Haven Court for delivering an oration without a police permit. The Supreme Court held that the ordinance in question violates Sections 1 and 5 of the Bill of Rights and also the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

BROKERS LOSE $25,000

Several well-known Boston brokerage houses have suffered to the extent of about $25,000 by the operation of a new stock scheme, it was admitted by police officials, following the arraignment in Municipal Court today of John T. Byrnes, thirty-eight years, of No. 722 Commonwealth avenue, and Edward J. Casey, thirty-eight years old, of Dawes street, Dorchester, a lawyer.

Byrnes and Casey are charged with conspiracy to steal $6,200 from Tucker, Bartholomew Co., No. 50 Congress street.

The offence is alleged to have been committed April 21.

District Attorney Pelletier and police officials have been receiving complaints recently about the operation of a certain stock, listed on the New York curb as Roi de France.

According to the police a scheme has been concocted to boost the value of the stock and to induce brokerage houses to invest. The method is this: A man goes to a broker and says he wishes to purchase about $10,000 worth of stock, but has only $1,000 to deposit. After looking over apparently good credentials the firm puts in the other $9,000.

The investor fails to call to pay the balance and the stock drops suddenly resulting in a loss to the firm.

Cardinal Quoted as Urging End of Violence to Gain Irish Home Rule

By International News Service.

London, April 29.—A new Irish peace plan embracing a scheme for extended dominion rule for Ireland will shortly be published by the Irish moderates, it was learned from an authoritative source this afternoon.

A dispatch from Dublin quoted Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland, as saying in an address at Clonde:

"I know for a fact that if the people of Ireland abandon crime they can obtain a full measure of self government with control of their taxes."

Cardinal Logue apparently referred to an offer made by Premier Lloyd George through Lord Derby, who recently visited Ireland.

PLAN SPECIAL COURTS FOR LIQUOR CASES

Washington, April 29.—Proposals to create special courts to handle liquor cases has been discussed with President Harding, Attorney General Daugherty announces. The attorney general said he had pointed out how serious was the effect on the present Federal courts of the large number of liquor law violations. He urged immediate relief and believed that some change would be effected in three or four weeks.

Gets Lawrence Mill Post

Lawrence, April 29.—Charles Dennett McDuffie has been named superintendent of the Everett Cotton Mills of this city to succeed Frederick Twiss who has been appointed agent.

HARVARD MAN IN COURT

Charged With Distilling Liquor Illegally in Back Bay Home

Louis A. Shaw, Harvard graduate, who lives at No. 6 Marlboro street, Back Bay, appeared before U. S. Commissioner Hayes today as the result of seizure of a still, fifty gallons of mash and five gallons of "moonshine" on the top floor of his house.

The house was raided yesterday by Prohibition Enforcement Officers Richard A. Kelley and Peter Sullivan. They allege they found the still in operation. They say that Shaw's butler helped them remove the still and the "moonshine" from the house.

Shaw was told to appear today before Commissioner Hayes. The enforcement officials said they would prefer charges of illegal manufacture of liquor against him. Shaw is said to have stated to the officers that he used the liquor in research work.

The house at No. 6 Marlboro street is the home of Louis Agassiz Shaw, a member of the Tennis and Racquet, Country and Athletic Clubs and a graduate of Harvard, class 1909. He also has a home at Beverly Farms.

To Carry Protest of 700,000 to Foch

Congressman's Wife to Stay in France All Summer, if Necessary, to Present Objections to Black Troops.

© by Clinedinst, Wash. D.C

Mrs. Fred A. Britten of Illinois

New York, April 29.—Mrs. Fred A. Britten, wife of Congressman Britten of Illinois, has gone to Paris to protest the use of so-called "black troops" by the French forces operating in the occupied portions of Germany.

She has a petition signed by 700,000 Americans of German birth denouncing the use of the African soldiers among white populations and will try to present it to Marshal Foch.

Mrs. Britten has stated she will stay in Paris all Summer, if necessary, to get an interview with Foch.

AGROUND OFF BLOCK ISLAND

Portuguese Steamship Marmuraeo on the Rocks and Leaking

Block Island, April 29.—The steamship Marmuraeo, bearing 450 passengers, ran aground on Black Rock on the south side of Block Island today in the thick fog.

United States coast guards who went to her assistance reported that the vessel was leaking, but that the passengers were in no immediate danger.

The Marmuraeo is a Portuguese liner and was bound to New Bedford from Lisbon.

A wrecking fleet was sent from New London to her assistance and the revenue cutter Acushnet was also despatched from New Bedford.

The Marmuraeo is the second Portuguese liner bound for New Bedford to go on the rocks this year. The San Vincente hit Packet Rock in Buzzards Bay in February and it was necessary to remove the 287 passengers.

PLAN $50,000,000 AIRSHIP COMPANY

Washington, April 29.—Announcement was made today of plans to establish here the headquarters of an airship corporation said to be the largest in the world, with a capital of $50,000,000. According to a statement by C. A. Tinker those interested in the corporation include Fred S. Hardesty, consulting engineer of Washington, Edward Schildhauer, who designed much of the electrical equipment on the Panama Canal; H. S. Jacoby, Henry Harrison Suppiee and Lieutenant Hanson E. Ely.

MRS. PERRY WILL BE TRIED IN MURDER CASE

Halifax, N. S., April 29.—Mrs. Clara Elizabeth Perry will stand trial on a charge of murdering her husband when the Supreme Court sits in Yarmouth in June. Today Magistrate Fallon committed her for trial. He also sent up for trial Mansfield Ross, who is charged with being an accessory after the fact. Both will remain in jail until June.

Cities Demand Eastern Trolley Arbitration

Arbitrate!

This demand swept today over the entire region served by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway system, from Nashua, N. H., to Newport, R. I.

The demand comes from all classes. Merchants and business men, threatened with dislocation of their business arrangements, are uniting with professional men and women and politicians in demanding that arbitration be resorted to that the strike peril may be averted.

Mayors of communities including hundreds of thousands of inhabitants did not hesitate to voice their opinion today that the Trustees of the system should fall in line with the union leaders and agree to arbitration.

MAYORS URGE ARBITRATION.

Among the other Mayors of large cities who have not hesitated to express their opinion, representative of

Peggy Joyce Eludes Pursuing "Sleuths"

Chicago, April 29.—Peggy Hopkins Joyce has given the slip to the detectives who, she declared, were spying on her in New York and is in seclusion here preparing to fight the divorce proceedings instituted by J. Stanley Joyce, her millionaire husband.

Peggy's purpose, it was declared, is to "Fight it out" with her husband. Jewels and property lavished upon her by Joyce, said to be worth more than $500,000, she claims as hers while Joyce seeks to recover them.

DIVES IN FRONT OF L TRAIN

Samuel Rottenberg Dying in Hospital After Fall at Egleston Square

Three hundred men and women waiting for cars in Egleston square Elevated station at Jamaica Plain were horrified today to see a man, later identified as Samuel Rottenberg, of No. 128 Howland street, Roxbury, leap or fall in front of a moving train.

Rothenberg was dragged fifty feet before the train could be stopped. He was removed to the City Hospital, and is not expected to live.

According to witnesses Rothenberg walked to the edge of the platform as the train drew in, and waited until it was only three feet from him before he jumped.

His body struck against the trucks; otherwise he would have been ground to pieces.

Rottenberg is thirty-five years old, married and has two children, Arnold, six years old and Irene, nine. He is a cigar maker and has lived at his present address for eight years.

Friends say they know of no reason why he should attempt to kill himself.

LOUD ANXIOUS FOR QUICK TRIAL

Accused Slayer of Policeman Confident He Will Be Acquitted

Clarence W. Loud, indicted yesterday, charged with the murder of Patrolman James A. Preston, is eager for an early trial.

Loud is reported as confident of acquittal and anxious to get the court ordeal over as quickly as possible.

It is expected that when he is arraigned in Middlesex Criminal Court at East Cambridge Tuesday he will ask for an early assignment of his case, but it is also expected that, owing to the congestion in the court, his request will not be granted.

It is probable that Loud's case will not be tried before September. He would prefer June.

Having obtained the indictment, the State authorities today resumed their investigation in search of further evidence against Loud.

An important development was the

DECLARES FEDERAL AGENTS SUSPECTED RICH IN DEAN CASE

SELECTMAN HOGAN TESTIFIES IN $10,000 SLANDER SUIT

Keene, N. H., April 29.—The statement that Judge Charles L. Rich of East Jaffrey "knew more about the murder of Dr. William K. Dean than he was willing to tell," was made by United States Secret Service men working on the case as well as by Selectman Charles E. Boynton, according to Selectman Peter E. Hogan, a witness today at the Rich-Boynton slander trial.

Selectman Hogan declared the assumption was general throughout East Jaffrey.

He also testified that following the grand jury investigation into Dr. Dean's death Judge Rich attempted to get from the selectmen a written statement, exonerating him from implication in the crime. The exoneration was refused, the witness stated, on the grounds that Federal agents, not satisfied with the grand jury probe, were still working on the case.

Mr. Hogan stated that he could not remember that the mysterious lights, believed to be German spy signals, were reported to the selectmen before the murder of Dr. Dean.

Evidence of mysterious signal lights on the hills overlooking East Jaffrey, the suspicion of which on the part of Dr. Dean, it is said, led to his murder by German spies, played the most prominent part in the evidence.

This phase of the Dean mystery, which gave the murder an international aspect, will be brought out in its entirety by counsel for Mr. Boynton, it is indicated.

A fight to preclude the evidence was made by Mr. Rich's counsel, but after a forty-five-minute conference between Judge Allen and counsel in the judges' chamber, it was ruled that testimony along this line is admissible.

JUDGE WARNS JURY.

Judge Allen explained to the jury that the evidence must not be taken by them as an indication of Judge Rich's implication in the murder of the aged doctor. He pointed out that the defendant's counsel do not intend to place the blame for Dr. Dean's murder on Mr. Rich, and neither do they intend to show that he was an accessory before or after the fact.

The signal light evidence, he further explained, is to be taken only as a means to prove or disprove the allegation that "Mr. Rich knows more about the murder than he has told."

According to Miss Ruth K. Hunniston, an attractive young woman, now employer as a bacteriologist for the Maryland Board of Health, it was her opinion that Judge Rich's house was part of the extensive signalling system.

She explained how every night for two weeks she watched the signal flashes from the roof of her home.

SAW SIGNALS NIGHTLY.

The lights were nightly occurrences on the various hills about the village and at the Dean place. Occasionally she saw what she believed were signals from the Rich home, she testified.

The lights over the hill and at the Dean place were flashes—short and long—which she interpreted, she said, as a code.

"At Mr. Rich's house," she said, "the lights were seldom in the form of dots or dashes. Mostly a light was placed in one room for about five minutes and then extinguished for the same period; then lighted again and then extinguished and so on."

Under cross-examination Miss Hunniston testified that the signal lights flashed from the Dean place were of the same nature as those flashed from the various hills.

Her nightly vigil, the witness declared, was made in October, 1918, during the period when Laurence M. Cofeldt was occupying the larger house on the Dean estate.

MIRROR FLASHES.

Martin Garfield, a neighbor of the Deans, testified that he had seen mirror flashes from the Dean house during Mr. Cofeldt's occupancy. He explained that he was doing some work about the premises for Mr. Cofeldt and noticed a peculiar light flash from the house to the East Mountain. He assumed that it was being made by a big mirror.

The flashes and answering flashes were made several times, he testified. The same witness also stated that he saw lights continuously flashing in the mountains on many nights after that.

Leon S. Turner testified that he had seen the same lights flashed from the Dean house. The flashes, he declared, were answered by similar signals from Temple Mountain.

Similar lights were seen by Walter H. Clark, one of the Jaffrey road agents. He testified also to noting "balloon shaped lights that went up and down on Mount Monadnock."

PRIEST A WITNESS.

The Rev. Herbert A. Hennon, rector of the East Jaffrey Catholic Church, stated that he was very active in endeavoring to clear up the mystery attached to Dr. Dean's death. He denied, under cross-examination, that he had any hard feeling against Judge Rich, but admitted that they had occasionally had "slight differences."

Mayor Says Hub Must Own Its Trolleys

Boston must eventually own and operate its own transportation system, Mayor Peters declared in an address at the annual meeting of the Women's Municipal League.

"This is so because transportation is so vital a part of life nowadays," he said.

"Workers in our offices and shops should be living out of the city proper, where they can get plenty of light and air and a chance for children to play.

"They cannot do that while we have congestion."

Mayor Peters in his address cited city-owned transportation as one of the things necessary in the scheme of a Greater Boston.

$10,000 EMERALD LOOKED DIFFERENT, SAYS EXPERT

Providence, R. I., April 29.—Expert testimony was heard in the trial of the suit for $10,000 brought by Mrs. Florence B. Stranahan against the Tilden Thurber Corporation for damage alleged to have been done to an emerald which had been left with the defendant company for repairs to its settings. The expert was Howard L. Carpenter, who declared that heat made emeralds poorer inasmuch as it increased the appearance of flaws that may have existed in the stone.

William Thurber, a member of the defendant company, also testified and denied that he told an assistant in his store that the stone appeared different at the time of its return to the plaintiff than when received at the store.

"YOU'LL NEVER SEE ME AGAIN," GIRL WROTE

New Bedford, April 29.—Fear that his daughter, while suffering from mental disorder, had ended her life, led James Newcomb of Church street to appeal to the police. A note with the brief message "Goodbye, you will never see me again," was the only clew left by the young woman before she disappeared. According to Newcomb, his daughter left her home Wednesday morning.

British in Orient Taunt Tourists Over Backdown at Nippon's Affronts

San Francisco, April 29.—British subjects in the Orient are laying wagers with odds of 3 to 1 that Japan and America will be at war within six months, while in many cities in China the British citizens are taunting the Americans because the United States has taken the many Japanese affronts without declaring war.

This is the information brought here by several prominent passengers who arrived from the Far East.

Charles Edward Russel, prominent writer and former member of the special Root mission to Russia in 1917, one of the arrivals, told of the betting by the British residents in Japan, although he declared that in his opinion the mass of Japanese people do not want war with America.

Witter Bynner, American poet and president of the Poetry Society of America, gave the information about the British taunts at Americans in China.

STRIKE OF PROVIDENCE MARINE HANDS CALLED

Providence, R. I., April 29.—A strike of marine workers will go into effect here Sunday morning, it is announced by members of the local union. The seamen, firemen, engineers, oilers, cooks and stewards, who are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, threaten to tie up all shipping in these waters in conjunction with a strike that has been declared by workers in other ports. The men won a strike here in 1918, when all the ships that carried coal and oil to this city were tied up.

HYDE PARK-CITY 5-CENT FARE COMMITTEE NAMED

A committee of ten was appointed to meet General Manager Dana of the Boston Elevated and discuss the feasibility of a five-cent fare from Hyde Park square at a meeting of the Thursday Nighters, in Lowell School hall, Jamaica Plain. The committee includes A. J. Moore, president of the club; Ex-Mayor James Curley and City Councillor Watson.

Besides these named, all of whom spoke in favor of a lower fare for Hyde Parkers, Representative James H. Mulvey, Representative H. J. Campbell and Mrs. Ella Hutchinson addressed the more than 700 interested persons attending.

SINKING OF BRIDGE HANDICAPS CAPE TRAFFIC

Wareham, April 29.—Motor traffic on the main artery to Cape Cod has been seriously handicapped by the sinking of the Cohasset Narrows bridge between this town and Bourne, the road bed of the bridge having settled, making even foot travel dangerous. The new bridge will not be completed before late this summer. The old bridge has been considered unsafe for several years.

LYNN MAYOR TO BAR MAY DAY PARADE

Mayor Walter H. Creamer of Lynn has announced that he will not grant a permit for a parade on May 1, if one is asked for. Up to date no application has been made.

The distribution throughout the city of hundreds of handbills urging "workers" to prepare for a demonstration on May Day caused the mayor to be flooded with protests from citizens against a parade.

The police have been unable to locate the persons responsible for distributing the circulars.

Letters From Dead in Unique War Book

By International News Service.

Paris, April 29.—The strangest war book yet published is about to make its appearance in France. It was written by scores of men, not one of whom is now alive. The idea was conceived by the Union of French Fathers and Mothers, an organization of parents who lost sons in the war.

The book is composed entirely of letters written from the front, published in chronological order and reciting episodes of the big battles of the war. It concludes with two letters written by young Frenchmen who were killed on the morning the armistice was signed.

SAYS GIRLS WERE MADE TO POSE UNDRAPED

New York, April 29.—A lurid picture of life in the movie studios at Fort Lee, N. J., the "Los Angeles of the East," was painted at the trial of a breach of contract suit brought by Harry McRae Webster against the United States Photoplay Corporation in the Bergen County, N. J., courts.

A deposition was introduced from a motion picture actress in which she alleged girls were compelled to pose in the nude. Mr. Webster was awarded a judgment of $3,500, but was ordered to pay the firm $2,550 as the result of a counter suit for damages.

GERMAN PEACE VOTE TOMORROW

Knox Resolve Sure of Passage in Senate After Parties' Chiefs Confer

Washington, April 29.—A vote on the Knox peace resolution before the Senate adjourned Saturday was assured by an informal agreement reached by Republican and Democratic leaders. Passage is certain. The Republicans are committed to the measure as a party policy and have enough votes to carry it easily.

The agreement for a vote was announced by Senator Lodge, at the conclusion of discussion of the resolution.

Unexpected opposition to the resolution appeared in the Republican ranks. It came from Senator Nelson of Minnesota, and destroyed the hopes of leaders for a solid party vote.

EX-DEPUTY SHERIFF ARRESTED FOR ARSON

Westfield, April 29.—Accused of burning a building to get the insurance money, Fred M. Fiske, former deputy sheriff of Huntington, was arrested by a State detective and released in bail of $2,000, for appearance in court. There are two complaints on the count, one being the alleged burning of a barn owned by the former deputy sheriff.

SAYS MOONSHINE CAUSED SLAYING

Travis Killed Brother Who Made Whiskey He Drank, Widow Testifies

That Frank J. Travis stabbed and killed his brother, John F. Travis of No. 5 Alpine street as the result of drinking moonshine whiskey made by John F., was testified to by the widow of the latter in Superior Criminal Court at the trial of Frank Travis on the charge of manslaughter.

Mrs. Travis testified that her husband had cautioned Frang repeatedly about the latter's drinking, and had ordered him from the house on more than one occasion.

She said her husband made his own whiskey, and had given Frank some on occasions, but that Frank had helped himself to much more than was given to him.

Following an argument, during which her husband was trying to induce his brother to go to bed, the stabbing occurred, she said. Her husband had struck Frank and the latter had used a knife, she testified.

STOKES' WIFE ADMITS SHE FREQUENTLY KISSED HAL BILLIG

SCRATCHED HUSBAND'S FACE

Describes Fight in Which Millionaire Hotel Man Was Badly Used Up

New York, April 29.—Tantrums? Never. Not in all her thirty-four somewhat turbulent years has Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes been possessed of even the littlest tantrum!

Despite certain admissions under cross-examination concerning scratches, which confined W. E. D. Stokes to his room for five days, and despite other testimony tending to prove a high velocity temper, this was the assertion of the former Denver girl, who is defending one of the most sensational divorce cases ever to go through the courts here.

"I only got cross a little, just as anyone else would do. I never let my temper get away!"

This was her answer to questions concerning her attitude toward her children and mother.

The incident when Stokes, a large, powerfully built man more than twice the size of his wife, suffered a scratched face occurred in 1916 upon the occasion of a disagreement over a plan to move from the Ansonia Hotel. She was asked:

"You flew into a rage, didn't you?"

"No, but Mr. Stokes did and I had to defend myself."

"Don't you know that Mr. Stokes was confined to his room at the Ansonia five days after the attack you made on him, and that he bears scars to this day?"

ADMITS KISSING BILLIG.

"Not at all. He had me by the throat and in defending myself, I scratched his face. It was the only part of him I could reach."

"You scratched him good and plenty, didn't you?"

"I hope I did."

The afternoon which wore along without the presence of Stokes, who is ill, was given over to an attempt at tripping Mrs. Stokes on her former declaration of brother-and-sister relation with Hal Billig, her cousin, and merely formal acquaintance with Edgar T. Wallace of California, two of the co-respondents named.

She admitted that she occasionally kissed Billig. But it was only upon such occasions as meeting after long absence, she said.

"Were you very careful about kissing him?"

"Oh, not at all. If I wanted to I probably would have."

There was much haggling over a picture of Billig alleged to be inscribed "To My Sweetheart." Smyth asked to have it produced while she denied any intention of "having anyone going through box after box of my things to hunt it up."

The picture, she said, is in Denver. Point by point she denied allegations of improper conduct with Billig, furiously denying, finally, that he was "taking the place of husband Stokes so far as being the man of the house was concerned" after the aged millionaire had left his home in January of 1919. She said:

DENIES MARRIAGE OFFER.

"I wasn't considering my husband then when he was framing on me."

She denied remembering Wallace's Christian name as "Edgar," explaining that she always had called him "Mr. Wallace." She also denied stating before Judge Lindsey in the Denver court that Wallace once asked her to marry him and she refused. The record of her testimony there was read into evidence today.

The concern with which she appeared to regard Stokes' first wife, Mrs. Phil Lydig, again was brought out through a letter written him in August 1916. It said in part:

"Dear Will: Your letter telling about your wives was partly amusing. Money is the goal, apparently, but not with me. Still I'd be a fool if I did not protect my children. Are you sure your divorce was got so it left no chance for anyone to get your estate?

"You gave an apartment house once for a wedding present. I have given you two children and I feel hurt that you haven't given me anything to show your appreciation of me. I don't, like the English, believe in the idea that the second son can fish for a living. I am uneasy about Mrs. Lydig. She hates you I know. You'll awaken to the sad reality in time and cast away her letters."

"The cook's night out," says Mrs. Smith, "holds no worries for me any longer—now I've discovered Ancre Cheese. Its new, coated wrapper keeps it fresh and clean, you know."

BIG STRIKE OF TYPOS LOOMS

Secretary of Labor Davis and Printers' Chiefs Fail to Reach Agreement

Washington, April 29.—The threatened nation-wide printers' strike loomed up stronger than ever today. The negotiations between Secretary of Labor Davis and representatives of the International Typographical Union apparently have failed.

The walkout is scheduled to take place May 1 in all newspaper and commercial printing offices that have not by that time established the forty-four-hour week. Unless some solution not now foreseen is agreed upon meantime, it now appears the workers' program will be carried out.

After three days of conferences with the Secretary of Labor, President McParland and Secretary Hays of the union have gone to New York. They will consult with their associates there with regard to any final effort that may be made to effect an amicable adjustment.

Secretary of Labor Davis refused to comment on the situation today. He is hopeful that a settlement may be reached within the next two days. It is probable that representatives of the publishers may be summoned to a final conference in an effort to avert the threatened strike.

CONVERSE CUT OFF SON'S WIFE

Capitalist Made Change in Will Few Days Before He Passed Away

Boston friends of the late Edmund C. Converse, native of this city and prominent capitalist, were surprised today to learn that in a will revised shortly before his death he had cut off his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Judith Adams Converse, from any share in his estate.

In a codicil dated March 29, 1921, he expressly revoked an earlier bequest of $100,000 to his son's wife.

He directed that the income from $1,000,000, which he originally intended to leave for the support of his son, Edmund C. Converse, Jr., Mrs. Judith Converse and their children, be used for "the support of his son Edmund and his children."

Bostonians are at a loss to account for this action, which came to public knowledge when the will of the millionaire was filed for probate at Greenwich, Ct.

Mr. Converse, born in Boston in 1849, died at Pasadena, Cal., early this month. He was connected with many big concerns, including the United States Steel Corporation, the National Tube Company, the Bankers' Trust Company and the International Nickel Company.

Heir to Ruman Throne Has Too Many Wives

By International News Service.

Paris, April 29.—That Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, committed bigamy when he married the Princess Helene, daughter of King Constantine of Greece, is the charge made by the Gazette do Lauzanne.

The Swiss newspaper declares it can prove that the heir to the Rumanian throne did not annul his marriage to Jeanne Marie Valentine Lambrino before he married the Greek princess and that the previous marriage was legal in every way. Furthermore, adds the newspaper, the Rumanian crown prince is the father of a baby boy born to his first wife.

The love affair of Carol and Mlle. Lambrino, daughter of a Rumanian general, received but scant attention in the newspapers, because it passed through a period when the war was engrossing public attention. By court order the Rumanian censor eliminated from all press dispatches nearly all references to Mlle. Lambrino. One Rumanian newspaper which had hinted at some of the facts was suppressed.

The Lambrino family is one of the best known in Rumania and enjoyed the intimacy of the court. The intimacy increased when the Germans invaded Rumania and the royal family sought refuge in Jassy, where the seat of government was installed. Prince Carol visited them often.

HAVERHILL POLICE TAKE MAY DAY PRECAUTIONS

Haverhill, April 29.—The police have received orders to watch all persons suspected of radicalism in anticipation of possible trouble on May Day. BALTIMORE.—Firemen filled a cistern at the Baltimore County almshouse and floated to safety a mule that had fallen in. The animal was in bad temper when rescued.

NEW YORK.—A slender "boy," with a detective story in one pocket and a pack of cigarettes in another, was found to be Margaret Lyons, fourteen years old, of Mowbray place, Kew Gardens.

NEW YORK.—A verdict of $1,500 was awarded Mrs. Emma J. Helm of Woodhaven at Long Island City for a beating with a pail alleged to have been administered by her father-in-law.

NEW YORK.—John McCormack, the tenor, was due to arrive here today aboard the Aquitania. By radio he vetoed a public reception.

BELMONT, N. Y.—Mrs. Blanche Terry, on the witness stand, charged with the murder of her husband, denied she had administered strychnine to him.

FRANCE OPEN TO NEW PROPOSAL

But Germans Must Give Firm Guarantees, Says Paris Foreign Office

By International News Service.

Paris, April 29.—France is willing to discuss new indemnity proposals from Germany, but "France must have firm guarantees and securities that Germany will meet her just obligations," it was announced at the Foreign Office today.

"I go to London in full confidence of an allied agreement, and that we are finally going to settle once and for all the difficult matter of reparations," declared Premier Briand just before he left Paris at noon today to attend the meeting of the supreme council.

In an earlier statement to American press representatives Premier Briand said:

"The German proposals are absolutely unacceptable to France. They show conclusively that the German government is an acting sham."

"Had Von Simons desired to show an inclination to meet the just demands of the Allies, he would have addressed himself directly to the reparations commission according to the provisions of the treaty, instead of addressing himself to Washington.

"By his attempt to take advantage of the present situation of the Washington government Simons undoubtedly uncovers the game which is his eternal wish to create friction among the Allies and provoke a rupture from which Germany will derive benefit.

"Well, we shall not fall for this manoeuvre. We will not stand any delay. We shall not have any further conversations. We will not have any more conferences with the Germans.

"We will occupy the territory which we have in mind to occupy and which will be a valuable gage for our program. Germany must understand that they are not winners and that might is no longer in their hands.

"The occupation of this territory, we contemplate, will also prove advantageous from a financial viewpoint. It will give into our hands the centre of the German manufacturing district as well as the nucleus of their ammunition factories.

"America must know also that the present problem, which is one of reparations only for other countries, presents another most important side for France.

"I mean that it has to do with security for France. Germany has not disarmed according to the terms of the treaty. The Franco-German frontier is only a thin line which our experts consider insecure.

"The only way of making Germany realize that she must give in to our just demands is by occupation of her territory, which we are going to carry out."

The committee in charge is composed of the following students: Carol Pierce, Charles S. Robertson, Carroll Hutchins, Edwin H. Wilson, Doris Turner, Cecilia Dalton and Laura Lafond.

WORCESTER TO KEEP PROMISE TO R. H. LONG

Worcester, April 29.—The city will lay 1,092 feet of 12-inch water pipe on Millbrook street to the site of the new factory to be erected by Richard H. Long. It will cost the city $8,000 and was promised to Long by last year's city government. Long intends to erect a million dollar plant on Millbrook street.

IRISH ELECTIONS ON MAY 24

Chief Secretary Says Poll Will Be Made Under Strong Guard

London, April 29.—Elections will be held in the North and South of Ireland on May 24, under strong military protection.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, in making this announcement in the House of Commons, declared that he possessed documents disclosing a sinister Sinn Fein plot to upset the polling in Ulster. But, he declared, the government will not be intimidated and is determined not to shrink from the application of the Home Rule Act.

The Irish secretary's speech was characterized by vehement denunciation of the Republicans.

The chief secretary admitted that the government had not succeeded in putting down the uprisings as it had hoped to do. One of the reasons for this, he asserted, was that the House of Commons is not united in favor of the campaign of repression. He declared:

"The virulence of the Sinn Fein campaign is now increased by the throwing of bombs in the streets, by the boycotting of English goods, by wrecking and burning trains, kidnaping women, slaying Protestants and soldiers.

"I regret that I have been unable thus far to protect innocent people."

Sir Edward Carson complimented the government on its decision to hold the elections and show the world that it is not intimidated by the terrorists.

Lord Robert Cecil demanded that the Premier and the Chief Secretary resign owing to the complete failure of their Irish policy.

Sinn Feiners say that the fact that the Home Rule Act is unworkable will now be speedily demonstrated, for the Southern Ireland Parliament cannot function unless the majority swear allegiance to the British throne.

During the coming month the government will likely make every effort, it is declared, through intermediaries like Lord Derby, Count Plunkett and others, to induce President de Valera to relinquish his title of President of the republic and accept instead the post of Premier under the South of Ireland Parliament.

GIRL SLAIN IN BOY'S CLOTHES

14-Year-Old Beauty Lived With Brother in Vacant House Before Shooting

Lewistown, Pa., April 29.—Erma Rhodes, a beautiful fourteen-year-old girl of Reedsville, was murdered on the highway near this town, following an alleged mysterious escapade with her elder brother.

The girl was found unconscious, with her jaw shattered by three revolver shots, and died a few minutes later in a neighboring farm house without regaining consciousness.

Less than two hours before she had been seen setting out on foot from the neighboring town of McClure in company with her twenty-year-old brother, Reed Rhodes, who was dressed in a soldier's uniform and carried a repeating rifle on his shoulder.

According to the authorities the girl left home last Friday with her brother and went to the vacant schoolhouse near McClure, where they lived for three days.

When the dying girl was discovered the rifle was found lying beside her with its magazine full and none of the bullets discharged.

She was strangely dressed, with a man's cap, a mackinaw, a union suit of men's underwear, men's half-hose and a blue shirt.

The brother, who could not be found today, was recently discharged from the Huntington Reformatory after serving a term for connection with the robbery of the Burnham Bank.

A search of Jack's Mountain for the girl's slayer was being organized today.

PUPILS DRINK WINE AS FOOD

Intoxication Reports Reveal Foreign Families Near Starvation In Connecticut

By International News Service

Stratford, Conn., April 29.—Following published allegations that children of foreign-born parents had appeared in school intoxicated as a result of drinking home-made wine, given them by their parents for nourishment because they were too poor to obtain food, which story has been investigated by Dr. De Hurter Howland and the school authorities, a drive was started by well-to-do residents today to raise a fund of $20,000 to care for scores of destitute alien residents.

According to the school authorities the investigation of the story that children were drunk in school was partially correct in that some of the youngsters of foreign families had been accustomed to drinking home-made wine, which is served at the table by many foreign families. It is denied that any were intoxicated.

However, an investigation of the residents of Avon Park and Hollister Heights, two neighborhoods inhabited almost exclusively by foreigners, disclosed the fact that many families were on the verge of starving.

At a meeting of wealthy Stratford people last night arrangements were made for the borrowing of $1,985 in cash with which to provide immediate relief.

DIETITIAN TO TALK AT HOME BEAUTIFUL SHOW

Elizabeth P. Lewis

The speaker at the Home Beautiful Exhibition Saturday evening will be Miss Elizabeth P. Lewis, a graduate of Simmons in 1918 and assistant dietitian at the Brookline Food Centre, which is the only municipally supported organization of its kind in the country. Miss Lewis says a food bureau must be adapted to the needs of its community. All sorts of questions are asked; how to get thin, how to get fat, what to eat and what to avoid. Classes are held in Brookline to teach children how to prepare simple vegetable dishes and to help mothers in the wise spending of their weekly income. Her topic, "How Can Young Men Trained in Domestic Arts Give Service in Their Communities?" is well illustrated by her own work.

MANCHESTER GIRL DIES AS A RESULT OF BURNS

Manchester, N. H., April 29.—Miss Cassie McKillop, aged thirty-eight, of No. 84 Winter street, died at the Sacred Heart Hospital here from burns received when her clothing caught fire at a gas stove in her home. Her brother, John McKillop, who was attracted by her screams, extinguished the flaming clothing by rolling her in a blanket and he was badly burned about the hands and arms.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE IN PETROLE FOR THE WOMAN WITH POOR HAIR

Few Weeks' Application Will Intensify Natural Beauty and Dandruff Leaves

There is a pleasant surprise in Noonan's Hair Petrole for the woman whose hair is dry, brittle, split ends, and who can never keep it in place. Dandruff also plays an important part to make the hair lifeless. One is really surprised how quickly such ailing hair responds to a little attention. Noonan's Hair Petrole will soon rid the scalp of dandruff, the hair becomes soft, glossy and fluffy and can be dressed in almost any style. The odor is mild and pleasing and the dressing is not at all conspicuous. Barbers apply it 15 cents treatment or you can buy it by the bottle at drug or dept. stores for $1.00, or direct from the manufacturers, T. Noonan & Sons, 38 Portland st., Boston, Mass.

CITIES DEMAND TROLLEY ARBITRATION TO AVERT STRIKE

Mayors Urge Eastern Trustees Fall in Line With Union Chiefs and Agree to Parleys

their constituents, that arbitration is the only logical and sensible stand for the trustees to take in view of the willingness of the men to submit themselves and their demands to it were the following:

WALTER CREAMER, Lynn.—I have repeatedly expressed my firm conviction that by means of arbitration alone was the solution of all labor difficulties to be found. The case of the threatened strike on the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway system is no different from any other. I believe that the trustees should agree at once to arbitrate and so avert the threatened inconvenience and loss which the public otherwise will have to bear.

WILLIAM A. BRADFORD, Quincy—Of course I'm in favor of arbitration for this, or any other labor matter in dispute between employes and employers. It is in my opinion nothing less than foolishly criminal to risk the monstrous inconvenience and distress such a strike as that threatened on the Eastern Massachusetts system by refusing to accept arbitration. The men already have admitted this and expressed their willingness to arbitrate on all of their differences. It is now up to the trustees.

"ONLY SENSIBLE COURSE."

PARKMAN B. FLANDERS, Taunton—I already have written to the Trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway system, urging them to agree to immediate arbitration of all matters at dispute between them and their men. This is the only sensible course to pursue, the more so as the employes have agreed to submit their case to arbitration.

LEO H. COUGHLIN, Taunton—I am most emphatically in favor of immediate arbitration of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway row. I have not expressed myself regarding the matter heretofore as I believed it was one for the action of Governor Cox, and have waited for him to speak. But when my opinion is asked I cannot hesitate for an instant. Of course there should be arbitration. The trustees should not delay a moment in agreeing to accept it.

ROGER KEITH, Brockton: I have told Governor Cox that Brockton was in favor of arbitration, and that I hoped arbitration would settle this disagreement.

J. J. MAHONEY, Newport, R. I.: It is inconceivable to me that any man, or set of men, holding quasi-public positions in this day and age, should hesitate for a moment to accept arbitration both in principle and practice, in all labor matters. I have not studied the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway tangle very closely, but it seems that arbitration is the only sensible way out.

UNIONS GAIN POINT.

The fact that the men have long since expressed their willingness to accept any terms imposed upon them by properly constituted arbitrators, is held on all sides to have enormously increased the strength of their position with the general public.

On the other hand it was generally conceded by men and women in all walks of life, questioned by this paper, that failure on the part of the public trustees to understand the volume of the demand for any step which might avert the strike, would be a mighty weapon in the hands of the union leaders, provided the matter came to an issue and the strike was called.

Union leaders today repeated their willingness to submit any and all of their demands and complaints to the consideration of arbitrators. None of them, in the absence of any definite move, would say whether they approved of the idea of making the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation the final arbiter in the dispute with the trustees, but there appeared to be a general and widespread opinion in union circles that as the board has all the necessary machinery for conducting the preliminary conferences and hearings, it would be most feasible to have it undertake the task.

SAY ATTITUDE UNCHANGED.

Referring to the attitude of the Public Trustees toward arbitration, union officials declared that so far as they can learn it has not changed since April 26, when a letter to all "Our Employes" was sent out by the board.

In that letter the trustees, after outlining the willingness of the trustees to "operate the road under new union agreement submitted by the trustees" or "without a union agreement and submit the question of wages to arbitration," while the company is to "deal with committees of employes as occasion may require."

This, declare union men, is flat repudiation of the existing agreement, and means that the trustees are not willing to submit differences other than the dispute affecting the proposed reduction of 20 per cent" in wages to arbitration.

RUNNING EXPENSES CUT.

It was also pointed out by the labor leaders that the company has recently turned many of its cars into one-man cars, thereby cutting operating expenses 50 per cent. on those cars and lowering them proportionately all along the line.

"The refusal of the trustees to meet our demand for arbitration shows the weakness of their position," said James H. Vahey, attorney for the union. "The public will see this plainly if the strike comes and the lines are tied up through the stand taken by the present management."

Lawrence Plans for Jitney Service in Event of Strike

Lawrence, April 29. — The City Council met in special session to arrange for jitney service in Lawrence next Monday morning in the event of a strike by the employes of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company.

The law forbidding jitneys to operate may be revoked. It is probable that the jitney men will be allowed to charge only five cents.

"If the jitneys make good in this pinch, they stay," said Mayor William P. White, "regardless of what the situation is with the street railway. We cannot expect the jitney men to come here and help us when we need them and then drive them out again."

It was said at the council meeting that ten carpenters were at work on the car barns making accommodations for the strikebreakers. This fact led to the discovery that no permit had been issued from the office of the local building inspector authorizing the alterations.

Trustees Promise Usual Service Despite Strike

Fred A. Cummings, publicity director for the public trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts, has issued the following statement:

"I believe the public is entitled to know what preparations have been made to operate this street railway after Sunday night, when the threatened strike is expected to take place.

"For many days this company has been recruiting experienced street railway operators in various New England cities and in New York State. The company has already obtained enough experienced car operators, motormen, conductors, line men and power plant employes to run the entire system.

"Several hundred of these men are already in Massachusetts and others are arriving daily. About 300 came today by trains and boats. The company expects to give the usual service Monday morning and has every reason to believe it will be provided in all the towns and cities where our cars are operated.

Norfolk Probate Court

The will of William E. Keating, late of Norwood, has been filed for probate in the Norfolk Probate Court, and the $4,000, consisting of personal estate is left to a sister of the testator, Miss Mary E. Keating.

The late Mrs. Winnie E. Henderson of Franklin, left an estate of $1,500, and her husband, William J. Henderson, is the sole beneficiary. The document is filed for probate at Dedham.

CHILD HOUSING BILL REPORTED

Senate Judiciary Committee Votes Favorably on "Anti-Race Suicide" Resolve

An anti-"race suicide" bill, which prohibits unscrupulous landlords from raising the rents of tenants when a family is increased by the birth of children, introduced in the Legislature when a storm of indignation was aroused over the disclosure of such tactics, has been favorably reported in the Senate by the Committee on Judiciary.

LATEST NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MOTION PICTURE WORLD

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

TERRISS, the director, was shouting to the electricians to fix certain lights. Suddenly the crowd opened up to let a man through. He was large and well-built and had a brisk, business-like manner. He climbed up the platform, walked to the front of it, and pulled out a small piece of glass from his pocket. It was made somewhat like a monocle, about the same size, but was square instead of round.

He put it up before his right eye and squinted solemnly through it while everyone in the building watched him breathlessly. Mr. Terriss, behind him, was looking steadfastly at the back of the man's head. Everyone seemed to know instinctively who he was.

He took the glass down and nodded with satisfaction. "Good," he said. "Turn out that light at the extreme left and you're all right." Everyone sighed with relief. I echoed it on principle. Then I turned to Barrymore.

"Who is he?" I whispered in awe.

He looked surprised. "Why, Joseph Urban," he said.

IN NO WAY TEMPERAMENTAL.

Urban! The great scene painter who had revolutionized stage settings! The man who had worked out such magnificent background for the movies! I had expected to see a tall, listless person with a dreaminess about him. Instead of that he was a prosperous business man, who went about his work briskly and with determination. Why, he might as well have been a lawyer!

I met him when he climbed down from the platform. He waved his small square glass around as he explained what he did with it.

Jack Mulhall finds that amusing his four-year-old son, Jack, Jr., is just as strenuous as acting before the camera. Mrs. Mulhall has frequently appeared on the screen, but devotes most of her time to her son and to her painting. She has painted a number of portraits of the Hollywood stars.

"I stand directly before the camera," he explained, "and look at the scene through the glass. It reduces the entire set to a small radius and I see it as it will appear on the screen. In other words, I am practically looking through the camera's lens.

COLOR SCHEME OF THE MOVIES.

"I notice the lighting of the scene, the color scheme, and the way the setting is balanced. While the colors don't count, still they shade light, dark and medium. It's the blend of these shadings that I'm concered with.

"There's no question that the backgrounds are becoming of more and more importance in the movies. An over-decorated set can completely kill the action and emotions of a passage in the story. On the other hand, a set that has been too simply arranged can flatten a situation just as much. The right atmosphere is as essential to a good production as the right players, right scenarist and right director."

Just as Mr. Urban left, Mr. Terris climbed down from the platform for a smoke while the "props" were getting the scene ready for another "shot."

"There's no need of your staying any longer, Lionel," he told Barrymore. "I'll have to take more scenes with this mob. There'll be nothing doing for you until tomorrow morning."

"Fine!" the star exclaimed.

A BARRYMORE ADMIRER.

"But before you go," Terriss went on, "I want to tell you a story about yourself. The other day as we were finishing up some scenes at the studio my eleven-year-old daughter, Mildred, came to get me. She watched the set for some time and completely lost her heart to you. She prattled on about you all the way home.

"That night my wife and I went to the theatre, and it seems that as soon as we had left the house Mildred and one of her little friends found your telephone number in some way and called you up at your home on Long Island.

"The servant who answered told her that 'Mr. Barrymore was out but that Mrs. Barrymore was there.' That finished Mildred. She gasped out 'Oh, we don't want to talk with HER!' and rang off hurriedly.

"When we came home from the theatre we heard Mildred in her room and went in to see why she wasn't asleep. She sat up in bed and sang out in heartfelt tones: 'Oh, daddy, you don't suppose I got Mr. Barrymore in wrong with Mrs. Barrymore, do you?'"

Barrymore threw his head back and roared as Terriss hurried back to the platform to "shoot" another scene.

BIG PRODUCTIONS COMING.

REGARDLESS of how much some producers argue that the public won't support super-productions much longer but demand the simpler, less pretentious pictures, it's certain that many super-specials are on the way.

The success of Marshall Neilan, David Wark Griffith, Cecil DeMille, William DeMille, and others with their "big" pictures has led others to follow. William Fox has made "The Queen of Sheba" and is making arrangements to film "Mary Queen of Scots."

Louis B. Mayer has completed plans to make "The Wandering Jew" and "King Lear." These will be made on a large scale. "The Wandering Jew" will probably be released at the time that the Belasco production will be put on the stage next Fall.

Colonel Selig, who filmed "The Rosary" when motion pictures were a comparatively new industry, had decided to make an up-to-date film of this story. Kathlyn Williams, Charles Clary and Wheeler Oakman appeared in the first version of this.

CAMERA CLICKS.

BEBE DANIELS' much press-agented prison term is being protested by her fellow prisoners in the Orange County Jail at Santa Anna. The luxurious way her cell was outfitted and the delicacies that were sent her struck the forger in the next cell as "pretty soft."

PROVIDENCE BOY DROWNS IN PIT

Two-Year-Old John Hawkins Tumbles Into Unused Gasometer Hole

Providence, R. I. April 29.—John Hawkins, twenty-six-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hawkins of No. 155 Public street, was drowned in twenty-two feet of water when he fell into the pit of an unused gasometer at Public street and Allens avenue, while playing near his home.

The gasometer was formerly used by the Providence Gas Company and since its disuse the pit has filled with water to the ground level. The pit is covered with an iron floor that has two holes in it, each about two feet in diameter. The child, with a companion who is about four years old, went into the gasometer and while playing he stumbled and fell into one of the holes.

Police of the Fifth station were notified and Captain Costigan attempted to recover the body. William F. Power of No. 173 Helen street, recovered it after grappling for several hours. Medical Examiner A. H. Longfellow pronounced death accidental and due to drowning.

DOUBT DOROTHY ARNOLD STORY

Police Don't Believe Missing Wife's Claim That She Is Lost Heiress

By International News Service.

Middletown, Ct., April 29.—The police are skeptical of the story told by Mrs. Leon A. Ingraham, of Durham, who previous to her disappearance Saturday declared to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Albert Ingraham, that she was the missing Dorothy Arnold.

No complaint has been made to the police concerning her absence, although her husband, Leon Ingraham, declares that he has communicated with the New York police in an attempt to find his wife.

The police believe the woman was either suffering from hallucinations or that she had recently read of the story of the missing New York girl and being discontented with her surroundings had used this as an excuse to leave home.

Although Leon Ingraham believes that his wife went to New York he is not certain of that fact inasmuch as Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Montromurri, with whom she went to New Haven in a jitney, declare that they last left Mrs. Ingraham on a street in New Haven.

She may have gone to Boston, where she may have resided before coming to East Hampton. It was in East ham, whom she married in 1918. Hampton that she met Leon Ingra-

Jury Dismissed When Women Disagree

Plainfield, N. J., April 29. —That women won't vote together on a jury any more than they will in politics was demonstrated here.

Four members of the fair sex sat with eight men in a suit resulting from a smashup between a street car and automobile.

The jury disagreed so loudly that it could be heard in the court room. At the end of two hours and twenty minutes the jury announced that agreement was hopeless and was dismissed.

The reason it was hopeless was that two of the women were on one side and two on the other.

WIDOW OF HERO GETS MEDAL

Cambridge Gateman, Killed in Rescue Attempt, Honored by Carnegie Award

A Carnegie hero medal has been awarded the widow of James M. Mullally, the Cambridge railroad gateman killed October 12, 1920, trying to save the life of Mrs. Emily J. Osgood.

Four hero medals come to Massachusetts, two of them to Cambridge, by the latest award of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

The other awards are: William H. Graves, Jr., No. 69 Brattle street, Cambridge; Arthur Ryan, No. 723 Slade street, Fall River; and Raymond J. Moore, Gleasondale.

Mullally, sixty years old, was killed by a train while trying to drag Mrs. Osgood from the track. She was fatally injured.

Graves, who is now nineteen years old, saved Robert Graves, forty, from drowning in the Annisquam river on July 25, 1918.

Ryan, then fourteen years old, saved Henry J. Ethier and attempted to save J. Lawrence Sullivan from drowning at Fall River on January 19, 1919. Ethier and Sullivan, mill hands, broke through thin ice on Cook Pond, 200 feet from shore.

Ryan exhibited unusual nerve for a boy of his age, but while he was extracting Ethier, Sullivan became chilled and sank.

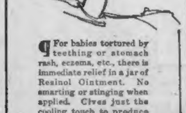
Moore, a mill hand, saved W. Henry McCoy, ten years old, from drowning at Gleasondale in 1919. Moore was then seventeen years old. Young McCoy broke through thin ice while skating on Gleasondale Mill Pond. Moore crawled to the edge of the hole and dragged him out at much hazard to himself.

SHOW GIRL POSES FOR JOAN OF ARC STATUE

Henry Kitson, the famous sculptor, is modelling a statue of Joan of Arc, to be erected soon at Rouen, France. He is using as his model for the immortal Maid of Orleans Mlle. Anna Codee, the statuesque Belgian chanteuse, featured in "The Whirl of the Town," now playing at the Shubert Theatre. The statue is being given by private subscription. Mlle. Codee is posing for Mr. Kitson almost daily.

ALCOHOLIC CASES IN WORCESTER INCREASE

Worcester, April 29.—Alcoholic cases admitted to the City Hospital during the first three months of the year show an increase of 33 per cent. over the same period in 1920, according to Dr. Edward P. Disbrow, assistant superintendent. There were twenty-two cases in 1920 and thirty-three in 1921.



For babies tortured by teething or stomach rash, eczema, etc., there is immediate relief in a jar of Resinol Ointment. No smarting or stinging when applied. Gives just the cooling touch to produce comfort and sleep. Sold in two sizes by all druggists.

HEROINE

Carol Dempster, Griffith film star, featured in "Dream Street," soon to be seen in Boston.

If you wish to be a film star, you should start as a dancer.

At least that is the experience of many successful film favorites, and Carol Dempster, the heroine of "Dream Street," most recent Griffith star, is a shining example. Miss Dempster was a dancer in the Denishawn troupe in California when Griffith saw her and persuaded her mother to let her go into films.

One of life's ironies is that her mother died just before she came into prominence in the film world, and did not live to see her famous. The Dempsters came from Duluth.

THREE SMALLPOX CASES ARE FOUND IN MALDEN

Three cases of smallpox were discovered in Malden when Dr. Fritz W. Gray was called to treat Mrs. Elizabeth Whitaker, twenty-eight years old, and her sister and brother, Lucy and Raymond Lee Jordan, thirty-two and twenty-six years old, respectively, for supposed grippe. After consultation with another physician, Dr. Gray diagnosed the cases as smallpox, and the three sufferers were taken to the contagious hospital.

PROVIDENCE BRICKLAYERS WILL FIGHT WAGE CUT

Providence, April 29.—An attempt to arbitrate the wage dispute between the bricklayers union and the master builders association has failed. The union is one of several in the building trades that has declared its intention of striking if the proposed new wage scale is put into effect. At a conference between committees of the two bodies the masters gave the union its choice of 87½ cents an hour or nothing. The men have been receiving $1 an hour.

RABBI WISE SAYS TERM "ALIEN" IS MISNOMER

"Americanization is not a process through which every alien must pass," said Rabbi Stephen F. Wise, at Wellesley College, to an audience which packed the chapel. "The fundamental moral and spiritual values which a foreigner brings with him makes him an American." He objected to the term "alien" as applied to a foreigner, declaring they resent it, feeling that they are not of their old country. They are of America in mind and spirit.

QUOTES BIBLE IN CLEAN-UP CALL

Haverhill Mayor, in Unique Manner, Issues Appeal for Week's Campaign

Haverhill, April 29.—Mayor Parkman B. Flanders, elected mayor as a socialist eighteen years ago and re-elected last Fall, has issued the uniquest mayoralty proclamation in the city's history, urging all citizens to participate in clean-up week activities. It reads:

"Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid."—Matthew 5-14.

"Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Mayor of a city, 'set on many hills,' and with hearty approval of many far seeing citizens, I hereby proclaim the week May 1-7 the opening of a continuous clean-up and paint-up campaign.

"We need a thoroughly cleaning and renovation. It is the sensible thing to do—for the health, safety, thrift, pride and happiness of all our people.

"Away with the rubbish piles. Banish the plague spots. Clean up streets and alleys. Cut the weeds, mow the lawns and trim the hedges. Repair and paint every building that needs it.

"Ambition in its highest conception is to dream big dreams and make them come true.

"The ambition to have a city clean and beautiful is soon to become a reality by the co-operation of all our people.

"It is everybody's job. Every man, woman and child will be expected to help.

"Let there be no slackers."

FATHER AND SON NEARLY DROWN IN CYCLE FALL

Manchester, N. H., April 29.—Evariste Dupont and his five-year-old son, Harland, were badly injured and narrowly escaped drowning when a bicycle which the father was riding and carrying the boy on the handle bars, shot down an eightfoot embars, shot down an eight-foot emstreet and landed in four feet of water.

Barely able to hold his boy above the water because of his injuries, the father's cries attracted the attention of a woman who was in the vicinity and who assisted him up the bank.

BRITISH PEER, WHO WED AMERICAN GIRL, IS DEAD

London, April 29.—Lord Alastair Leveson-Gower, only brother of the Duke of Sutherland, died of malaria in Johannesburg, South Africa, according to cable dispatches. The deceased peer married Elizabeth Helene Demarest, daughter of Warren Gardner Demarest of New York in 1910. He served with distinction as a lieutenant of the scouts' Yeomanry during the World War.

Harmony's impressions at Houghton & Dutton dance.

About 700 members and guests of the Houghton & Dutton Mutual Relief Association made merry in Paul Revere Hall at the annual May party of that organization.

The affair was in the nature of a costume dance and H. L. Lightfoot as a country gentleman in a top hat and dress suit led the grand march.

Other costumes ranged from Joan of Arc to Charlie Chaplin.

Among the guests were W. J. Norcross, general manager of the firm, and Superintendent C. F. Vedder. Harry B. Lowe was chairman of the general committee.

LAWRENCE DEATH CAR DRIVER HELD FOR TRIAL

Lawrence, April 29.—Bail was fixed at $10,000 in the case of Daniel D. Barberian of Chandler road, West Andover, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Joseph E. Burke, an ex-service man, in an automobile accident last Wednesday. The case will be heard in district court here May 9. It was said that Barberian was on the wrong side of the street as he drove his car along South Broadway and failed to turn when the Burke machine approached.

NANTASKET COTTAGES REPORTED SCARCE

Nantasket real estate dealers have done more business this season than ever before, according to statements made by several of the men. The cottages have been rented earlier than in previous years and are bringing higher prices.

IRISH BUTTONS IN QUICK HIT

First Four Sell for $250 Each in Fall River Before Official Day

Buttons in Fall River seem to be going at a very high price from the reports received from Mrs. Patrick Kieran, chairman of the Fall River Women's Division for Relief in Ireland.

Although the button drive does not take place until tomorrow, Mrs. Kieran has already sold her first four buttons at $250 each. The first three were purchased by three brothers, John, James and Patrick Sullivan. Then Mrs. Kieran, finding such success in her initial effort, sold two more buttons at $100 each, among the purchasers being Mrs. James M. Morton, Jr., wife of Judge Morton.

The Fall River diocese is doing wonderful work, and it is expected will go over the top.

Today there were several interesting occurrences in connection with the drive for the Irish Relief Fund, among which was a sale by the Women's Division of a cake which brought $400.

Another interesting incident was that of Mrs. Catherine Goggin, Dorchester avenue, South Boston, who sold an embroidered pillow top for $50 in aid of the cause.

Mrs. T. J. Donovan, Medford, gave a whist party which netted $50.

Rev. J. H. Harrigan, pastor of St. Ambrose's Parish, Dorchester, turned in a collection from his parish of $1,322.

Local No. 1077, B. & M. Freight Handlers, Malden, donated $100, and L. C. B. A. Branch No. 1267, Dorchester, turned in $102 as the result of a dance.

Wendell Phillips Council A. A. R. I. R., sent a check for $505.40.

Thomas F. Croake, No. 432 Meridian street, East Boston, contributed $100.

Checks should be made payable to Joseph H. O'Neil and sent to No. 166 Devonshire street, Boston.

STEPFATHER INDICTED AS B. U. BOY'S SLAYER

Eugene D. Drioly, fifty-five years old, of Littleton was indicted for murder in the first degree by the grand jury at East Cambridge. Drioly is alleged to have attacked his stepson, Vincent P. Plancich, with an axe while he was asleep in their home. He died from that wound a few hours after at the Deaconess Hospital, Concord.

Plancich was nineteen years old and a second year student at the Boston University Law School. Domestic trouble between the boy and his stepfather is said to have been the motive for the attack.

'L' MEN ACCEPT CUT IN PAY

Wages of Uniformed Workers Reduced 7 P. C.; Other Employes Slashed 10 P. C.

An approximate reduction in wages of 7 per cent. for blue uniformed men and 10 per cent. cut for the mechanical and miscellaneous crafts of Boston Elevated union employes has been unanimously accepted by the workers. The reduction proposed by the trustees will be in two installments. The first begins July 1 when the present agreement expires and the second six months later.

The cut amounts to 3 cents per hour for the last six months this year and 2 cents per hour for the following six months. This will reduce the present maximum of 70 cents an hour to 68 cents for the blue uniform men for the remainder of the year, beginning July 1, and 65 cents an hour for the six months following the one-year agreement.

The action of the employes constitutes the quickest readjustment of wages in the history of the National Railway Men's Union with which they are affiliated. The proposals were given them Wednesday by the trustees and accepted at two meetings held within forty-eight hours. The agreement will be promulgated today.

MEN OF 104TH INFANTRY HONORED AT WESTFIELD

Westfield, April 29.—This city took on a military aspect not known since war days when veterans of the 104th Infantry gathered here for the dedication of a tabelt commemorating the decoration by France of the regimental colors for bravery at the battle of Apremont. Governor Cox, in the dedicatory address, paid high tribute to the men assembled and their comrades who made the supreme sacrifice.

CHINA TRADE BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Washington, April 29.—The House, by a vote of 247 to 39, passed the Dyer bill placing American corporations doing business in China on the same basis as their foreign competitors. An amendment to strike out the section of the bill exempting the corporations trading in China from payment of the excess profits tax was defeated, 265 to 71.

STATE STILL PURSUES WOMAN SUSPECT IN MURDER CASE

alleged discovery of evidence that the accused Melrose salesman always carried the revolver which has figured so prominently in the case in a shoulder holster.

He stated in early stories to the police that it was in the automobile.

The significance of the discovery lies in the fact that if he carried it in a shoulder holster he would have ready access to it, and his story of the bandits would be weakened.

In his role of "Yankee trader" of antiques or anything that brought profit, Loud travelled extensively in his automobile and carried money. He used a shoulder holster to afford readier access to his revolver in the event of a hold-up on the road, it is said.

This discovery shed new light on the tragedy in the opinion of the police. The revolver had six chambers and the State now contends that five shots were fired at Preston, one missing and four taking effect.

It was announced today on the highest authority that the State has not eliminated nor has it ceased in its pursuit of a Melrose woman suspect, despite the fact that the Middlesex Grand Jury, called specially to probe the mystery, made but one finding—an indictment against Loud charging him with first degree murder.

No secret bill was returned, but it is known that the prosecution is still working on lines that have been followed since the arrest of Loud, so far as his alleged woman companion is concerned.

It is hoped that something more incriminating may crop out to strengthen the chain of circumstances against this woman, said officials on the case. It was obvious that the State lacked evidence sufficient to implicate her.

One of the trump cards held by the State is Loud's alleged contradictions in his own statements, according to disclosures today. Certain officials predict that he could be convicted on his own words. He is credited with having made damaging statements immediately after his arrest.

The Grand Jury inquiry lasted five hours. In that time thirty-odd witnesses were heard. District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts examined all of the witnesses.

One of the most conspicuous witnesses was Carl P. Dow of No. 65 Rowe street, Melrose, clerk in a Boston bank, whose wife, Mrs. Kate Dow, was twice examined by District Attorney Tufts, first at her home and later at a three-hour interview at the home of her counsel, former Senator Claude L. Allen of Emerson street, Melrose.

BURRELL A SPECTATOR.

Dow remained in the Grand Judy room thirty minutes. Mrs. Dow was not a witness nor was Mrs. Ida Loud, wife of the accused shoe salesman. Mrs. Dow's father, former Mayor Charles H. Adams of Melrose, was in the lobby but was not called. Another lobby spectator was former State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell of Malden, but he did not testify.

Miss Dorothy Smith of No. 40 Pemberton street, North Cambridge, who was interrogated by District Attorney Tufts more than a week ago, was represented by Attorney Conrad Crocker, but did not appear before the grand jury.

Among other witnesses heard were:

Dr. Roscoe D. Perley of Melrose, medical examiner, who performed the first autopsy.

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, medical examiner for Suffolk County, who performed the second autopsy on Preston's body in the tomb at St. Patrick's Cemetery, Stoneham.

Bertram M. Dearborn and Douglas A. Day, both of Malden, who found the body of Patrolman Preston on Lowell street a few minutes after the murderer had fled.

Frederick M. Libby of Wakefield, nearest witness to the shooting. While taking a short cut through a field Libby saw two figures enter an automobile and drive away at top speed, after hearing a woman's scream.

Edward M. Seabury and Robert Harper, both of Wakefield, who passed in a bus and saw Patrolman Preston talking with some one through the open door of a Ford sedan and saw a second figure behind the car.

STEAL MAIL, SHOOT AGENT AT BAYONNE, N. J.

Bayonne, N. J., April 29.—Bandits early today stole three mail pouches, one of them containing registered matter, from the baggage agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey while he was taking them from the station across the street. Matthew Lyons, the baggage agent, was shot in the face when he attempted to resist. The amount of money in the pouches is not known.

BIG NAVY BILL PASSES HOUSE

$340,000,000 Appropriation Is Carried According to G. O. P. Program

Washington, April 29.—The Naval Appropriation Bill, carrying approximately $396,000,000 for maintenance of America's sea force for the next fiscal year and providing $90,000,000 for construction under the 1916 building program, was passed by the House, 212 to 15.

Efforts by Democratic members to reduce the appropriation for new construction led to further debate on disarmament, during which numerous amendments seeking to direct President Harding to call a conference with Great Britain and Japan were voted down or ruled out of order by Representative Walsh, Republican, of Massachusetts, who presided.

Republican Leader Mondell predicted that a definite move toward disarmament will be made by President Harding before the close of the present session of Congress.

Ethel Coolidge to Wed Wood's Driver

Andover, April 29.—Miss Ethel R. Coolidge, who claims she is a cousin of Vice President Calvin Coolidge and who recently said she would become a movie actress, has announced her engagement to Christian Leroy Ambye, a chauffeur.

The young people have filed marriage intentions with the city clerk of Manchester, N. H.

Miss Coolidge is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Coolidge, residents of "Shawsheen Village," the "model community" established here by President William M. Wood of the American Woolen Company. Ambye is President Wood's chauffeur, and also lives in Shawsheen.

WATER CUT OFF, BABIES SUFFER

City Officials Relent After Apartment House Tenants Protest Action

Because of a controversy between city officials and owners of apartment houses at Nos. 873 and 875 Huntington avenue, Back Bay, over payment of a bill, occupants of the two houses were forced to do without water for six hours.

At the request of the Rent and Housing Commission, who intervened from humanitarian motives, the city officials capitulated and turned on the water.

CLAIM BILL NOT PAID.

Miss M. R. Eilberg, who claims to be one of the owners, declared that the water bill was paid, but through an error of bookkeeping no record of payment was made. Commissioner of Public Works Thomas H. Sullivan said the water bill had not been paid.

Among the worst sufferers from drought while the battle raged were the family of Mrs. Julia McDonald, consisting of herself, her small daughter Helen and nine months' old "Billy" McDonald.

"I supposed the water was being shut off while minor repairs were being made," said Mrs. McDonald, "and drew off only a little. As the hours passed without the water being turned on, we began to suffer.

"It is unnecessary for me to say what the loss of water means to a family such as mine in a small apartment. With two children, one two years old and the other under a year, deprivation of water for six hours is too great a hardship to put on any family. And one of my neighbors, who has more children than I, was worse hit than I was.

HEALTH BOARD NOTIFIED.

"I was told that some of the tenants telephoned the Board of Health about the matter. I consider their action justified. Certainly it was somebody's business to look into the matter. The responsibility should be so placed that such an occurrence can never happen again."

According to the rent receipts Myer I. Eilberg of No. 19 Ruthven street, Roxbury, is owner of the apartment houses. Miss Eilberg, who said she was his sister, and a part owner, declared that he would sue the Water Department for turning off the water without notice.

WIFE MISSING AFTER BEING SENT INTO HOUSE

Mrs. Pauline Gryerka, 24 years old, mother of two children, of No. 12 Front street, Chelsea, was reported missing by her husband, Thomas Gryerka. He said he found her on the waterfront last night removing her shoes and stockings, and sent her into the house. Since then he had not seen her. She is described as 5 feet 3 inches high, wearing a red suit and hat, and white shoes.

BOSTON IRISH WHITE CROSS OPENS CAMPAIGN

Boston Unit of the American Auxiliary to the Irish White Cross this week began a campaign for members and funds. All money raised by the organization is used for relief in Ireland. The White Cross is non-sectarian and non-political.

Miss Katharine Grady is head of the Boston Unit, and included in its membership are many nurses, who are members of the first group; associate members, in the second group, and auxiliary members, third group.

A number of entertainments and parties will be held to swell the fund. The first will be a dance in the Hibernian Building, Roxbury, the evening of May 18. Dr. Gertrude Kelley of New York will be a guest. The head of the White Cross in New York, who is now in Ireland investigating, will tell of conditions she found in Boston Unit holds meetings every Wednesday at the Copley Square Hotel. It is expected that the drive will result in many new members for the organization.

The American Auxiliary to the Irish White Cross was organized in New York, just before Christmas, last year. President DeValera has indorsed the work.

Stocks Go Up in New York; Call Money Opens at 7%; Foreign Exchange Irregular

MANY SELL AT YEAR HIGH

Tires and Steels Are Leaders in First Hour; Motors and Rails Firm

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were strong into the second hour when there was a slight reaction following the announcement of a 7 per cent call rate. Trading was of good volume and had breadth. The action of Bethlehem Steel directors in maintaining the regular common dividend rate was helpful to steels in general. Reports as to increased demand for tires lent strength to rubber shares. Among issues to sell at highs for the year around midmorning were American Woolen and Royal Dutch.

Largest gains were made by Car and Foundry, American Locomotive, Baldwin, Houston, General Asphalt, Famous Players, International Paper, Kelly Springfield, Mexican Petroleum, U. S. Rubber, Pan American and Pressed Steel Car.

Among the weakest were Texas Co., Beet Sugar, Atlantic Gulf, Central Leather, Kansas City Southern and Sears Roebuck. Foreign exchange had an irregular opening.

HAD A GOOD START.

The market had a strong opening, half a dozen issues selling at new highs for the year within a few minutes. They were Car and Foundry, American Locomotive, U. S. Rubber, Famous Players, Orpheum and Coca Cola. Tires, steels, equipments and a number of specialties did the best around the opening, and later oils became conspicuous in the advance. Motors and rails made small gains as a rule. Studebaker was not so strong at the start today as at the close yesterday. While railway shares were not dealt in to any great extent, sentiment toward them is more favorable. This is partly on account of reports by several big roads, including Union Pacific, Rock Island and Baltimore & Ohio, as to March earnings. Their net fosters the hope that the tide has turned to the benefit of transportation companies. So-called independent steels made early gains and attracted some attention, Crucible advancing the most. Gains during the first hour ranged from fractions to more than three points.

POOL ACTIVITIES.

While it is generally admitted that conditions are becoming more favorable for bulls, it is also said that the market at present is reflecting activities by pools more than anything else. According to Wall Street gossip, new ones are being formed and it may be expected that more stocks will be subjected to manipulation. Borrowing demand for stocks after the close yesterday was fair and the loaning rates generally were 6½ per cent. for industrials and 5½ per cent. for rails. The advance of the call rate to 7 per cent. near the close yesterday caused some surprise among traders, especially as the rise followed the reduction of the Bank of England's discount rate at a time when it was understood the money strain was relaxing everywhere. No explanation was given except that the higher quotation was due to temporary and local exigencies. Government withdrawals from New York banks on Thursday did not much exceed $9,000,000.

Big Price Cut

One of the largest producers of cotton blankets has cut prices for this Fall about 40 per cent, as compared with the quotation of a year ago.

BOSTON ISSUES RULE HIGHER

Market Has an Irregular Opening and Is Narrow; Curb Strong and Active

The Boston market was irregular in price trend when trading began and was narrow in all respects. It showed no material change during the forenoon. Coppers were weak as a class, and packing issues irregular. Boston & Maine, which advanced a point, was the only New England rail dealt in during the first hour. Orpheum and Waldorf sold at new highs for the year. They were active. Boston Elevated was traded in to a greater extent than usual and advanced two points. American Pneumatic was another leader, and made a small gain. Among issues to advance from one to two points were Barnsdall, American Sugar common, American Woolen common and Swift International. Calumet & Hecla and United Drug declined a point. Gains were in the majority during the morning.

Among the issues to make fractional gains were American Telephone, Ventura, West End, New England Telephone, Carson Hill, Elder, Orpheum, Mexican Investment, Davis Daly and Waldorf. Small losses were sustained by Copper Range, North Butte, Swift & Co., Simms Magneto and International Cement.

CURB MARKET STRONG

The Curb market had a strong start and was also more active at the outset today than for several sessions past. Early leaders were Eureka, United Verde Extension and Hecla Divide. The last named stock was the trading feature. Issues to make opening gains were Arizona Tip Top, Alpha, Eureka, Hecla Divide, Jerome Verde and Texans. Among those to decline at once were United Verde Extension, Daddy and Boston Ely.

At the end of an hour Eureka was up 4 cents at 71 cents, Hecla Divide 9 cents at 21 cents, Alpha 1 cent at 84 cents and Black Hawk 1 cent at 18 cents. Declines included Boston & Montana 1 cent at 84 cents, and United Verde Extension ½ at 28. The last named stock was off more than two points at its opening. Jerome Verde lost its gain and Daddy recovered its loss.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Beacon Oil Co. three per cent. dividend is payable April 30 to stock of record April 25.

For March Southern Pacific reports gains of $1,815,122 in gross and of $1,336,861 in net, while increases for three months were gross $1,648,536 and net $593,737.

March gross of the Maine Central increased $599,171 but its net decreased $308,841. Gross increased $1,670,499 in the first quarter and the net deficit increased $192,976.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, April 29.—Considering weak cables the cotton market had a steady opening, prices being 5 points lower to 3 points higher. The demand came mostly from Wall Street and trade interests, while New Orleans and other Southern centres sold. Later the list gradually worked lower under the pressure of the South, and at the end of 15 minutes was about seven points below the previous close. Opening prices were: May, 12.13; July, 12.65; Oct., 12.24; Dec., 13.72; Jan., 13.84; March, 14.16.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, April 29.—Wheat opened ⅜ to 2⅜c higher. Corn was ⅛ to ⅜c lower to ⅛c higher, and oats ¼ to ⅜c higher. Lard was unchanged to 5 cents higher. Opening prices were: Wheat—May, 1.29 to 1.30; July, 1.05¾ to 1.06. Corn—May, 56⅜ to 57; July, 60⅜ to 61; Sept., 63½ to 63⅞. Oats—May, 36 to 36⅛; July, 37⅜ to 37½; Sept., 38¼ to 38⅜. Lard—May, 9.52; July, 9.95.

Railroad Situation

We have prepared an interesting booklet covering all the dividend paying railroad securities in the country.

It contains complete statistics on each road covered, including latest earning statement, total bond indebtedness, graphic chart of price range for last twelve years, present dividend yield and market possibilities.

Holders of railroad securities will find it of practical value.

Corporation Reports

Net earnings reported for the March quarter by the Godchaux Sugar, Inc., were $801,300. After depreciation, taxes and preferred dividend the surplus was $116,200.

On January 1 this year Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co. had a surplus of $5,516,615.

For 1920 the Tennessee Copper & Chemical Corporation reports combined operating profit of $162,650 against an operating loss of $234,416 in the previous year.

The Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co. reports for 1920 net profit of $1,287,167, which is equal, after preferred dividends, to $38.95 a share on outstanding common, against $1,751,508 or $54.95 in 1919.

The Electric Bond & Share reports for 1920 net income $2,127,600, against $1,897,471 in 1919.

Last year earnings by the William Cramp & Sons Ship & Engine Building Co. available for dividends were $2,134,554. After Federal taxes this equals $14 a share against $34.50 a share in 1919 and $29.63 in 1918.

The Canadian Consolidated Felt Co. reports for 1920 a surplus after interest of $20,721, compared with $71,877 in 1920.

For the first quarter of this year the deficit of the Gulf States Steel Co. was $102,917, against a surplus before dividends of $308,938 for like period of 1920.

The March quarter income statement by the Coca Cola Co. shows an operating profit of $844,597 and net income of $633,948.

At the close of 1919 Prairie Oil & Gas had a profit and loss surplus of $93,367,112, against $79,912,551 in 1919.

Seventy-two Different Railroads Analyzed

Some railroads which were formerly considered A-1 are now rated second or third class, or are considered hazardous from an investment standpoint, while others which were formerly rated as second or third class, or of doubtful rating, are now in the A-1 group.

The question before the investing public at this time is "Which are which," and in order to help investors solve this question, for some time to come we are going to issue analyses from time to time covering 72 different railroads, which will be sent free to anyone upon request, the first of the analyses ready for distribution including

Pennsylvania Stockholders

The reduction of the annual dividend rate of the Pennsylvania Railroad from 6 per cent. to 4 per cent. will affect the income of an army of investors. The road's stockholders numbered 138,393 on April 1. This was an increase of 15,472 in a year and a gain of 2,933 in March, 1921. On April 1 this year the road had 65,435 women stockholders, and they owned 31.21 per cent. of the outstanding stock.

More Copper Buying

The copper surplus is being reduced slowly, one concern selling 2,500,000 pounds to a domestic consumer at 12½ cents a pound one day this week. Another concern found a market for 3,000,000 pounds at the same figure. A larger tonnage could have been sold in both instances had the sellers been willing to part with more metal at that price. Sales of Michigan copper to German and Dutch buyers within a fortnight are estimated to total 6,000,000 pounds.

Every Employe Owns Stock

It is stated that a recent offering resulted in making every one of the 16,000 employes of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. a stockholder of that corporation. It is producing 15,000 tires a day and plans to increase the output to 20,000 on May 1. At the latter figure the output will exceed before the war production.

Calfskin Going Up

Chicago reports more demand for calfskins and a higher price. Packers are asking 20 cents a pound. Recently the current price was 16 cents, and a low grade sold as low as 13 cents.

GERMAN MARKS

About a year ago Marks rose from one cent to three cents in ten weeks. Buyers at the low point could have sold and made three dollars for one.

The rise was temporary, but we believe we are now right on the verge of another tremendous advance, and this time it will be permanent and far-reaching. When Marks once start there may be no catching them. They are likely to increase in value two and even three dollars per thousand in as many hours.

It is for every interest of a Banking House to have its customers make money, and, with this in mind, we are placing as many German Marks as possible while we can obtain them for our clients around present prices. Upon settlement of the indemnity, which is imminent, Marks should soar, and the golden chance to buy will be lost.

Though we sell all kinds of Foreign Exchange, having Bank connections and maintaining substantial balances in all the great countries, we especially advocate buying German Marks, above all other moneys, to make big profits, and we are convinced purchases should be made at once, for delay may spell the loss of a Life's Opportunity.

We issue a descriptive circular for free distribution. Send for it! Read a few facts and decide for yourself if there can be the remotest possibility of making a mistake.

Mr. Griffith's Letter About

"DREAM STREET"

To the Public Whom We Serve:

We are presenting a new play at the Shubert MAJESTIC, Monday night, May 2nd. It is called "DREAM STREET."

It is suggested by characters in two stories by Thomas Burke. The scenario is by Roy Sinclair.

The only claims we make for this is that it is a motion picture on which we have been working since the production of "Way Down East."

It is not the most expensive production in the world . . . nor is it from the highest priced scenario ever bought. It is just a play.

This will doubtless be shown in other theatres after our presentation here. We are quite sure, however, that it will not be shown elsewhere to the advantage that it is in the Shubert MAJESTIC, with the special thematic orchestral accompaniment and other effects.

We shall try to make as fine a presentation of it as possible. If you have found enjoyment in our past performances, we hope those of you planning to come may like something in this.

While there will be two dollar seats, there also will be plenty of good seats at a dollar, downstairs; and the prices as a whole will be very much less than the prices of "Way Down East."

Sincerely,
D. W. GRIFFITH

CLIMAX IN RAIL CRISIS JULY 1

Radical Change in Management of Roads Urged in Letter to Senator

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,

Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Norman Hapgood.

Washington, April 29.—The railroad crisis develops in various ways. It is expected to reach its climax about when interest becomes due on large part of the bonds. A Senator who is particularly interested in this question, said to me the other day:

"People up on the hill (meaning Senators and representatives) say very little about it. They don't like to talk about it."

Robert W. Woolley, until last January a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has an article on railroads in today's issue of the Yale News. He first points out that since the development of our productive capacity during the war it is probably conservative to say it is "necessary to dispose regularly of 10 per cent of the products of our fields, our mines, and our mills to foreign countries if we are to develop our normal industrial peace once more."

COAL PRODUCTION IMPORTANT.

But while the restoration of foreign trade would do much to steady the railroad situation, "the transportation problem is bigger than that. For instance, until we establish regularity of coal production, with attendant continuity of employment for mine labor and steady use of cars, the railroad question is going to be increasingly vexatious. Industrial peace and protection against profiteering in the most widely used and most necessary of all commodities are of first importance."

Mr. Woolley then speaks of the admitted failure of the Esch-Cummins act. Next he points out the increasing effect of water competition. Products now go from the Pittsburgh district to Atlantic ports and thence to Pacific coast ports in half the time and at about two thirds the cost of rail shipment. Recently a steamboat, heavily laden with manufactured products left Cincinnati, via the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, for New Orleans, where the cargo was transferred to an ocean-going vessel bound for Pacific coast ports.

A Senator studying the subject has received from one of the country's leading experts a letter in which he says:

"You cannot eliminate waste and honest graft as long as you have more or less overpaid and utterly incompetent executives representing or thought to represent interests adverse to the railroads.

WANTS RADICAL CHANGE.

"It is of no use for the executives to talk about the wickedness of time and a half for overtime when most of them are paid two to ten times what they are worth for all their time. . . . I have lost all confidence in the competency of present railroad management. I want a change, and a radical one."

The following is from another letter, also from an expert of national standing:

"So far as the railroad executives now have any plan at all, it is apparently to stop all work on maintenance, discharge wholesale every employe they can dispense with, and thus try to show some apparent earnings. They will not be real earnings. I am told that hundreds, perhaps thousands, of engines and cars that ought to be in the shops are being stacked on side tracks, inadequately protected from weather deterioration. Of course, if we have an increase of business that Summer there will be a cry of lack of equipment and another charge of mismanagement under Federal control."

An investigation into the railroad situation is about to be opened by Congress; these facts are respectfully submitted.

Wise Parents Only Good Judges of Whipping

There's no general rule in the matter of whipping children or not whipping them. Whipping is good for some, bad for others. Children are individuals, not a class." That's what one of the correspondents whose letters are printed below thinks. What do you think? "To whip or not to whip?" is the question. Address your communications to "Training Editor, Boston American, No. 5 Summer street, Boston, Mass."

NO ESTABLISHED RULE.

Training Editor Boston American:

Most of your correspondents seem to think you can establish one rule for the children. That's wrong. You can't even establish a rule for the children in one household. Different kiddies, different methods. I know a family which has two children. They look alike, but one responds to advice, while the other has to be spanked at regular intervals. The amateur psychologists may try to dig up some reason for this, but I think it is nature, and that a wise father or mother is the only good judge of the question, and then only for their own children. M. L.

Boston.

DOES NOT STRIKE IN ANGER.

Training Editor Boston American:

Permit me to answer Mrs. White's objection that she never saw the strap used except as an outlet of temper. I have three daughters, all over twelve. When one of them is disobedient I send her to the library and let her meditate for an hour on what she has done. Then I punish her. There is no anger. There is no seizing or striking in anger. The punishment is not barbarous. I see a direct relation between the opposition to physical punishment and the present standard of child conduct. MRS. N. C. M.

North Cambridge.

STERNNESS NEEDED.

Training Editor, Boston American:

If more children who need it were whipped there would be fewer criminals of eighteen or nineteen years of age. Those who blame mothers who use the rod or strap ought to be ashamed of themselves. Too many mothers are "softies" and care more about their own easily aroused pity than about the welfare of the child. Too many lose heart after giving a child one stroke. At the first cry they stop. The child observes and takes advantage of this foolishness. Mothers who are not stern enough to punish children when they need it are not of stern enough stuff to have children. MRS. HAZEL J.

Boston.

RUN FOR A CLUB.

Training Editor, Boston American:

It is ridiculous to think some parents have to whip their children to make them behave. Such parents are mentally lazy. They refuse to use their brains and run for a club. They ought to know that bringing up a child is a complicated and important duty and should try to do it well. All some of them want is to save themselves trouble.

AN AMERICAN MOTHER.

Dorchester.

WHIPPING ALL WRONG.

Training Editor, Boston American:

I believe whipping is all wrong. When I was young I was whipped often. I went away [illegible] me after each beating. I [illegible] the navy. Now I live under regulations [illegible] that [illegible] and can't see what whipping ever did me any good.

Yours against whipping, A. [illegible]

POOR PUNISHMENT.

Training Editor Boston American:

Whipping a child is poor punishment. Advice is oftenest what is needed. I am eighteen years old [illegible] have younger brothers and sisters. [illegible] take your child and whip it for everything that you think is wrong [illegible] make a big mistake. [illegible] the fault. You drive it to others for [illegible] comfort [illegible] up won't [illegible]

SHOULD BE ASHAMED.

Training Editor Boston American:

I am a young man of twenty-two and the oldest of four children. To the woman who says she whips her eighteen-year-old daughter I would say she ought to be ashamed of herself. I will never as long as I live forget or forgive my father for the beatings I got from him. My mother tried to protect me. Most of the beatings were given in anger.

Einstein Theory 'Old Stuff,' Says Wait

Washington, April 29.—The Einstein theory of relativity is old stuff. It was dug out in Newburgh, N. Y., by Dr. Wesley Wait twenty years ago.

At least that is what Dr. Wait declared here. He hurried to Washington to present his case before the National Academy of Science but arrived too late. Now he's going to take it up with the Smithsonian Institution.

The only difference between the Einstein and the Wait theory is the name Dr. Wait christened his theory, "The Unity of Universal Existence."

IRISH HACKED TO DEATH

Letter to Cambridge Woman Tells of Death of Cork Men "On the Run"

Six young men "on the run" in Ireland were found horribly mangled in a barn in Blarney road, Cork according to letter received by Miss Agnes Clark of No. 8 Berkshire place, Cambridge, from a relative in Ireland.

The letter reads in part:

"There was a terrible act committed last Wednesday morning by forces of His Majesty's government on six young men about twenty years of age, who were 'on the run,' as most of our young men are, because they are afraid to remain in their own home.

"These six young men who were sleeping in a shed on the Blarney road, were found by Crown forces and literally cut to pieces. Some people say they were cut while alive, while others say a machine gun was used on them, but of course, the Crown forces say they had a hand to hand fight, but strange to say not one member of the Crown forces got a scratch.

"If I were to give you a full description of the condition of these six boys, you would be absolutely sick, therefore, I will only say when their parents and brothers and sisters were shown their bodies they could not recognize them."

Protests Altering Wadsworth House

Shall the last relic of the early days at Harvard, Wadsworth House, occupied by numerous Harvard presidents, be changed from its original looks to make way for college offices? Frederick J. Wilder thinks it should not be and as a graduate has written the Harvard Alumni Bulletin about it as follows:

"It should be our duty to preserve the old colonial architecture, especially when it is so closely associated with Harvard and the lives of many great men. No pressure for space however great should allow us to sacrifice the last monument of the earliest days at Harvard (especially when Wadsworth House is in a perfectly usable condition as it stands."

Real Service

Service as we render it is something more than prompt, efficient and courteous treatment when you buy. Our service is also a merchandising service that scours the whole market for the newest and best, that assembles it here in great quantities and wide varieties, and that enables us to sell it to you for less than other stores feel obliged to ask.

It's this broad-gauge policy---this service that really serves---that has put the Kennedy Stores in the very front rank of American retail institutions—as celebrated for style and quality of merchandise as for conspicuously greater value-giving.

It was this policy of rendering real service that prompted our thorough house-cleaning last Winter so that now we're firmly established on the new normal basis with all new goods at new low prices—prices which we guarantee for the entire season.

Kennedy SHOES $6.85 to $9.85 are extreme values

Kuppenheimer Suits at $35, $40, $45 and $50

These choice garments express our idea of what constitutes real clothing service. They're superb in quality of materials and tailoring, supreme in style, and here in such wide variety of patterns, models and sizes that we can fit and suit any man. And this season they carry a bigger price advantage than usual.

Good Suits at $25

In style, fit and quality they belong in the $30 to $35 class. A large proportion are young men's models, single and double breasted, in the popular herringbone patterns.

Better Ones at $30

Vast variety of herringbones, pencil stripes, checks, plaids and plain colors, made single and double breasted, in men's and young men's models, some with belt in the back [illegible] values.

Top Coats at $25

Big stock at this writing, but selling fast, so don't wait. About every color, pattern, fabric and style, and all remarkable values at this low price. Others up to $50.

Boys' Blue Serges

Norfolk and plain styles, cut on snappy lines and tailored in the usual Kennedy way. Biggest values in the city without any question—values that take you right back to before-the-war days.

$7.95 $10.50 $14.50

and so on up to $23.50

Extra Trousers to match at very little extra cost.

Wingo Let Out

Outfielder Wingo of the New York Yankees has been released to the Atlanta (Southern Association) team.

BABE RUTH BACK HOME

Polo, Golf and Brain Power

By JACK CONWAY

Babe Ruth, baseball's greatest drawing card, is in Boston today with the Yankees. There will be great crowds at Fenway Park while the King of Swat is here despite the fact that Mr. Harry H. Frazee, owner of the Red Sox, is not popular with Boston and New England fans. Babe's terrific batting power can even overcome this handicap.

The Yankees have not been winning ball games very regularly this season despite Ruth's home-runs. New York's bought and paid for team seems to lack that something which enables ball clubs to smash their way through all opposition to victory. Apparently there are some things one cannot get even with money.

News dispatches from England state that the American polo team in the international matches will have fifty ponies to pick from. As only four men play on a polo team at one time, forty-six mounts will always be in readiness for service. The English polo team has been supplied with sixty-four ponies. Thousands of dollars will be spent in paying the expenses of the American and English polo teams. The wounded war heroes at the Parker Hill Hospital, Roxbury, will probably read with interest about this lavish expenditure of wealth while they themselves are virtually without athletic equipment.

Francis Ouimet, Jesse Guilford and Fred Wright, New England's three representatives of the American golf team which will take part in the British amateur championships in June, have the ability and courage to make things extremely interesting for the opposition. Ouimet defeated Vardon and Ray, two of England's greatest professionals, when he was a mere slip of a boy. He is now confident he will bring back a new trophy to America.

Eddie Shevlin, man of boxing science, will try to prove once more tonight that by USING HIS BRAIN he can defeat a man who is much stronger than he is and who is able to punch a great deal harder. If Shevlin's legs and arms will respond to what his brain directs them to do, he will win. The trouble with boxers and other athletes, however, is that they begin to deteriorate physically when their brains are at their highest point of development.

* * *

Get out in the open and take part in some healthful form of recreation if you desire to live to a ripe old age. Too many people are dying in their forties and fifties for the welfare of the country. More regular living and less "jazz," combined with some outdoor exercise, will do a lot to cut the death toll.

SCHOOL STARS COMING FAST

Young Pitchers Showing Real Class as Rival Nines Get in Shape

By FRED C. LANE.

A glance at the scores of Wednesday's ball game proves that pitching by the schoolboys is now rapidly approaching mid-season form. Glenn Sheehan, tossing for St. John's Prep, allowed Salem but one hit. [illegible] of B. C. and Hafney of Waltham pitched wonderful ball for their teams [illegible] eleventh inning.

Having honest-to-goodness ball parks to play in schoolboy ball teams of Greater Boston will be expanding [illegible] Before getting the Walpole street grounds, the boys were compelled to play on fields where crowds were so thick that the outfielders were invisible.

Star Athletes Meet in Penn Relays

Philadelphia, Pa., April 29.—Athletes great and small, representing five hundred schools and colleges throughout the country, are gathered here today for the twenty-seventh annual running of the historic Pennsylvania relays. More than 3,000 performers on track and field, from all parts of the country, including a team representative of the best in France, will vie for honors on Franklin Field today and tomorrow.

Records may be shattered before the meet comes to an end.

More than a score of athletes who represented the United States in the Olympic games at Antwerp will be seen in action here. Three Olympic winners of gold medals—Dick Landon, high jumper, of Yale; Allen Woodring, winner of the two-hundred metre events, and Earl Thomson of Dartmouth, who competed for Canada, but who was looked upon as an American, will tear up the cinders if the weather clears.

Colleges Battle for Relay Laurels

There will be other stars of the American Olympic team in the [illegible] who finished second to Thomson at Antwerp in the 120-yard high hurdles, will compete against the Dartmouth star [illegible] pole vaulter, who pretty [illegible]

The A[illegible] sprint medley [illegible] championship [illegible] cathlon and [illegible] medley relay [illegible] State [illegible] Penn State, Nebraska, Carnegie [illegible] University of [illegible] Kansas Aggies, Penn, Pittsburg [illegible] and Georgetown were entered.

Nightingale Favorite in Two-Mile Run

[illegible] Nightingale of West Virginia the favorite [illegible] three-mile event of last year, Romig of Penn State, Higgins of Columbia and [illegible] performing with brilliance this [illegible]

Spring, was expected to furnish a real race.

The distance medley relay race, with the best that [illegible] Iowa State, Illinois, Kansas Aggies, Pittsburgh, Syracuse, Princeton, Penn State, the Navy, Yale, Columbia, Delaware and Georgetown have to offer, promised to be a great contest. The Navy, incidentally, is competing in the relays for the first time with a team of sixteen men.

The fifty-six-pound weight and the running hop and jump were special events on today's card.

Hayden-Stone Wins

Hayden-Stone defeated Payne-Webber 2 to 1, in a Financial League game played on the Dean street grounds, Brookline.

STILL CHANCE TO AID HEROES

Fund to Purchase Athletic Equipment for Shell Shock Victims Is Open

Opportunity is still at hand for those who desire to help the shell-shocked victims of the World War, now quartered in the West Roxbury Hospital and who are still in need of baseball and athletic equipment to replace that which was destroyed in the recent fire at the hospital's Red Cross hut.

The Back Bay Post of the American Legion, sponsor for the fund, added over forty dollars to the slowly growing amount already realized, but has had so many appeals from other hospitals in this section that a little more generosity from fandom generally will be appreciated.

The fund to date follows:

TECH '24 TO RUN AT ANDOVER

Yearlings and Schoolboys Compete in Track and Field Events Tomorrow

The Tech freshman track team journeys tomorrow to meet the Andover prep school for the first meet away from the home field since Coach Frank Kanaly took the team out on the outdoor track. The poor showing the freshmen made in the Tech annual interclass meet last Saturday does not shake their confidence of beating Andover.

The Tech team will be handicapped by the loss of Spurdle, star miler, who is out because of illness. The team is weak in the field events, which were Andover's strong points this Winter, but in the hurdles, half-mile and weights the team has a strong array of athletes.

THERE'S A LONG PROFIT IN A HIGH PRICE

WHEN a manufacturer sells hats in small lots to numerous men's furnishing stores and various department stores.

1. He (the Manufacturer) has to get "His."
2. They (the Retailers) have to get "Theirs."
3. Then you get "Yours."

and you usually get it good because you pay for both "his" and "theirs."

My hats go direct from the factory into my stores, and it's more economical to handle 10,000 dozen lots than single dozen orders.

That is why my Quality is up, and my Price is down to $3.45, including a rich Satin or Brocaded Silk Lining.

IG CROWD OUT TO GREET FORMER SOX STAR

By NICK FLATLEY.

The Home Run King is home again. Batterlng Babe Ruth was h us today at Fenway Park, and accordingly there was the season's st drive on the turnstiles. The Yankees haven't been exploding the gue to date, but the Batterer has been basting the onion, and that's that any real fan wants.

eing Ruth with the Yankees re-de the faithful fans of the stock used to sell for a nickel a share now worth a thousand, but urchasable. Only difference, the bino was gilt edge when he ued out of the local picture.

hile Ruth keeps hitting the in ers can flirt with last place and draw baseball's greatest crowds. fan who kicks in a dollar forty whatever the new price is, is perly satisfied, when he sees a base go soaring majestically over ces and grand stands and garages, things like that.

e base knock is the lure that es the pastime profitable. The st wonderful fielder in the world not get as much in a month as a t slugger will in a week. And gotta admit the Babe is a slug-here are quite a few circuit clouters the enemy. Meusel and Ward Pipp all hit the lively baseball with ome vigor. Looks as if they put in tile extra rubber so that the Babe d keep right on attracting the ngs.

amuel Jones was listed to start series that being his regular as-ment for the year. He lost to the nks over in New York, but it t his fault. He tossed well ugh to win had the Boston bats n working at all. The Senators o proved that the Yanks aren't d to beat, and perhaps the mple may help the native athletes y were woefully easy for the high ed New Yorkers on the Polo unds.

But the club is getting into shape w, and with a few warm days will able to make any team extend elf. The new batting order seemed produce the punch that was lack-before.

The Babe isn't as fast as he used be, they say. But he's getting mers faster, which is all that counts. is time a year ago, he hadn't poled e. This is another year.

The showing of Elmer Myers on the e mound against the A's in their last me here tickled the cockles of the anagerial Mister Duffy's heart. Elmer evidently is in shape again and ll all the stuff that went with his ght in a row last Fall. He's now ady to take his turn and according the battle front of the Fenway ck is greatly improved.

Elmer was chased in hurriedly when e Bush foolishly kicked himself out the game but despite a sudden indup was more or less there from e first swing of his gangling but werful wings.

Ruth should be getting a percentage the extra money the year tow the fans y now bring in. 'Twould meet his to fines, anyhow.

Messrs. Hendryx and McInnis have arted clouting the baseball, and putng them together in the batting der was a wise move. As soon as att recovers his eye there will be a al threat up there near the top of e list.

John Collins has been dropped wn but he's due to hit very short-He never has failed before and ang every day should make life rfect for him. Shano isn't any ungster, and it will probably take few warm days to oil him up operly.

hose Dodgers keep right on walng the Giants, giving New York other reason to hate that part of ir town they call Flatbush. Loss to the Robins is as agreeable a New Yorker as prohibition, when t.

e Athletics lost two out of three s, but they showed more base-ball and evinced a better fighting spirit than any Mack team has brought to town since the game's greatest machine was dissembled. Connie will not win any pennant this season but he's going to put up quite a fight to keep out of the cellar.

His athletes have lost the idea that they are beaten before they start and that's counted as much as anything for their lowly fortunes at least two seasons back. If Shano Collins hadn't passed a slow ball through the drawn-in infield yesterday there's no telling how the game might have concluded.

That soft-boiled hit ruined the spirit of Scott Perry and let the Sox breeze in.

Sauce and Sass

by CHARLES E. PARKER

IT'S DIFFERENT NOW

"I've got no use for new ideas," once said my friend, the chicks,
"It's my belief that them what has are crazy lunatics—
I'll tell 'em so, if they ask me to try new fangled flicks."

And when the automobile came out [illegible] "Well, [illegible]
Take my advice and do not sell your [illegible]
I'll bet the darn thing blows to bits or [illegible]"

Then when the airships first appeared I got this [illegible] from it:
"Son, you should know as well as me that [illegible] meant to [illegible]
And those poor fools that try it out will prob'ly fall and die."

And 'bout a year or so ago, he said as we raced [illegible]
"This tennis is a little game that no real man would play, While them that golfs are simpletons whose minds are in decay."

But yesterday in motor car he drove me to the links
And paid no heed to passing planes while stating what he thinks
That tennis is too gosh darn hard except for husky ginks.

Of profound interest to motorists should be the rules for turning a corner laid down by Professor A. G. Webster of Clark College. Says the prof:

"Bear in mind that the centrifugal force is proportionate to the curvature of the corner.

"Then decide the minimum of the square of the centrifugal force.

"Calculate the nth power of the curves.

"With these three factors determined, it is comparatively simple to turn a corner without skidding.

Wonder if Frank Kramer keeps that dope in mind each time he wheels around a bike track? Perhaps his success as a cyclist may have hinged upon it. Who knows?

Furnas expects to make it hot for Nightingale in the special two mile run at the Penn relay carnival.

Sendefuhr of Kansas is entered in the shot-put. He expects to "sendefuhr," but Weiss is wise to Sendefuhr's ability. Weiss comes from Illinois—in fact, he is said to have put the nose in Illinois.

The French relay team is getting a lot of boosting. They say Fery is fery good; that Mercery has winged feet and that Seurin will be sure in with the leaders.

It cost Tex Rickard ten thousand old smackers to insure Dempsey and a Carpentier against injury or accident for the period intervening before the bout. Wonder how many cold smackers it will cost the insurance company to cause Harry Wills, Kid Norfolk, Jamaica Kid, Joe Jeannette, etc., to pull their punches during the next sixty days or so. A couple of those brunettes might do some damage if they let 'em fly.

* * *

An excellent suggestion, Alpheus. Why not change Hal Chase's moniker to "Merry" Chase? He certainly led 'em on one before they corraled him at St. Jose.

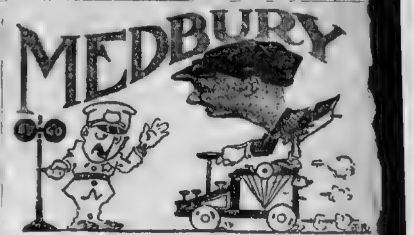
NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE OUT OF INTERCOLLEGIATES

Durham, N. H., April 29.—New Hampshire State athletic [illegible] have decided not to send a team to compete in the Eastern intercollegiates at Springfield.



When people get rich the first thing they do is to go out and buy a lot of antiques. An antique is something which becomes valuable after it's too old to be worth anything.

These wealthy birds will buy anything as long as it's old. One woman purchased the fountain pen used in signing the Declaration of Independence.

Another woman bought the pencil and paper that Noah used in checking off the animals as they came on the ark.

Then she purchased the only picture of "Sitting Bull" standing up.

The clerk asked her $2,000 for a pair of shoes made from the hide of one of the cows captured in the "Battle of Bull Run."

She was doubtful as to whether it was genuine or not until he told her he had caught the cow himself.

As the woman wanted something that nobody else had, so the clerk called the boss, and the boss showed her a clothespin used in holding one of George Washington's shirts on the Mason and Dixon line.

She even bought the saw [illegible] George used in cutting the cherry tree. She told the [illegible] in history that he had chopped it with a hatchet, but the clerk told her not to believe everything she read.

He said he only had two or three of the original saws in stock, and didn't expect another shipment for a long time.

These stores do a legitimate business, but they can't help kidding a person along when they come into the store and ask for one of the [illegible] picked off George Washington's cab[illegible] during the cold Winter at Valley Forge.

Antique hunters with money will buy anything as long as it's an antique. One antique dealer tried to sell a dame the original Liberty Bell and she said she didn't want it because it was cracked.

But he succeeded in selling her an old ringside ticket to the fight of Cain and Abel.

She thought it wasn't an original because it didn't have a war tax stamp on it.

CHAPLIN TURNS DOWN MILLION

Refuses Fortune to Appear On English Stage For One Year

Los Angeles, April 29.—Charles Chaplin has been offered and has rejected the huge sum of $1,040,000 for appearing on the stage nine times a week during a year in a play specially written for him.

The offer came from a group of English financiers and had Chaplin accepted he was to start for London not later than August 15 when the contract would become operative.

The offer calls for a salary of $20,000 weekly and a bonus of a quarter million dollars for acceptance within sixty days.

FRECKLE-FACE

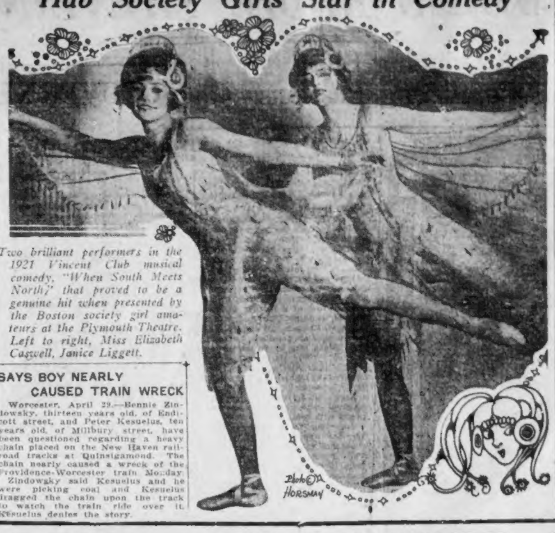
Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advertisement.

Hub Society Girls Star in Comedy



Two brilliant performers in the 1921 Vincent Club musical comedy, "When South Meets North," that proved to be a genuine hit when presented by the Boston society girl amateurs at the Plymouth Theatre. Left to right, Miss Elizabeth Caswell, Janice Liggett.

SAYS BOY NEARLY CAUSED TRAIN WRECK

Worcester, April 29.—Bennie Zindowsky, thirteen years old, of Endicott street, and Peter Kesuelus, ten years old, of Millbury street, have been questioned regarding a heavy chain placed on the New Haven railroad tracks at Quinsigamond. The chain nearly caused a wreck of the Providence-Worcester train Monday.

Zindowsky said Kesuelus and he were picking coal and Kesuelus dragged the chain upon the track to watch the train ride over it. Kesuelus denies the story.

BICYCLE RUN TO FRANKLIN FIELD

Judges to Select Winners in American's Outing Contest at Track

Franklin Field, Dorchester, has been chosen as the destination of the Boston American social bicycle run to be held on Sunday afternoon, May 15. The selection was made as this big playground offers better accommodations for such an event than probably any other spot in the city of Boston.

While the old rendezvous at Chestnut Hill reservoir is ideal in many ways as a destination, the hillside overlooking the roadway was found too small to properly accommodate the throng of persons who took part in the American's run last Fall.

Next month's run will start from Copley square at 2:30 p. m. and will cover the following route: Dartmouth street into Commonwealth avenue, out Commonwealth to Charlesgate West, turning left into the Fenway, across Brookline avenue into Riverway, crossing Huntington avenue into Jamaicaway, through Arborway to Forest Hills square, into Franklin Park via Circuit Drive (turning right). The riders will pass through Franklin Park, one of the finest playgrounds in America, into Blue Hill avenue by way of the Blue Hill avenue entrance, passing the famous columns.

From this point the procession will turn right and travel along Blue Hill avenue to Talbot avenue and into Franklin Field. This great athletic field contains 77 acres. The spot where the judges will pick the winning riders in order to award the five bicycles and other prizes is near the big locker building.

The building has checking facilities and showers where riders may indulge in a bath, if they desire a cooling off. The judging will take place on an eighth-mile cinder track used for field athletics.

EVERYBODY INVITED TO TAKE PART IN BIG BICYCLE RUN

Entry for Boston American Free Social Bicycle Run.

Name ....

Address ....

Age ....

ROOM FOR ALL RIDERS.

No automobiles are permitted in either Franklin Park or Franklin Field which means that the cyclists will not be annoyed by passing traffic. Regardless of the number of cyclists who participate in the American's run, there will be sufficient room at the destination. Forty thousand people can be accommodated at Franklin Field. Crowding will be unnecessary. There will be plenty of breathing space for all.

This route will give the riders an opportunity of seeing one of the finest parkway systems in the country. It makes an ideal run. The entire route is over macadam roads. There is only one small hill along the route, near Jamaica pond. It is not steep enough to cause cyclists to get off and walk.

James B. Shea, head of the Boston Park and Recreation Department, and Deputy Commissioner William P. Long, have assured the bicycle editor that they will do everything in their power to make the run a success.

TWO MORE JUDGES.

Two more widely known wheelmen have been added to the list of judges to decide the winners of the five high grade bicycles, valued at $375. They are Hubert N. Burnes of Gloucester, who conducts a business in Hyde Park, and George Cutler of Revere street, Winthrop Highlands.

Mr. Burnes is a former champion of Essex county, having won that honor on a high wheel at Saugus race track. Quite a difference between the bicycles of those days and now. The wheel he rode in winning weighed forty-eight pounds. Mr. Cutler was one of the pacemakers for John S. Johnson when he broke the two-minute record.

Every mail is bringing the bicycle editor entries for the outing. They have come from all parts of the city and vicinity. All that is required to become an entrant is to clip the coupon from the American, write name, address and age and mail to "Bicycle Editor, Boston American, 80 Summer street, Boston (1), Mass." and you will be entitled to be listed as one of the party. There's no time like the present. DO IT NOW!

SEE OPEN SHOP MOVE IN NEW BEDFORD OFFER

New Bedford, April 29.—Notice that work on the three schools and factories being constructed by the Z. W. Bishop Company would be started on Monday morning for those who desire employment at the new price of $1 an hour for masons and 80 cents an hour for carpenters and other mechanics, was issued today by the contracting firm. The announcement of the company is taken as an indication of a move toward the "open shop." Officials said no preference would be given to union men.

"You must say BAYER Aspirin"

"Bayer" on Genuine Aspirin—say "Bayer"

Warning! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago and for Pain. All druggists sell Bayer Tablets of Aspirin in handy tin boxes of 12, and in bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

THE WILD GOOSE

A Gripping Story of Conflicting Passions

BY GOUVERNEUR MORRIS

Noted Author Weaves Thrilling Tale Full of Dramatic Episodes

This dramatic story has been made into a stirring motion picture by Cosmopolitan Productions under the masterly direction of Albert Capellani.

By Gouverneur Morris

Author of "His Daughter," "When My Ship Comes In," "The Seven Darlings," "The Penalty" and Other Stories

Synopsis Up to Date

Francis Manners, an architect and artist, is doing some special work in California while his beautiful wife, Diana, and their small girl, Tam, are in the East. He gets a letter from Diana and wonders what she is doing in town, as they had agreed to keep Tam in the country during his absence. He decides to go back, meets an old hunter on the train who relates the legend of the wild goose, which, after losing its mate, never mates again. Manners looks forward to surprising Diana and Tam. On arriving in New York he telephones to their place in the suburbs, only to find Diana is in town. Tam delightedly answers the phone. Diana has Ogden Fenn with her when she meets Francis. They start for the country.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued

"HE doesn't mean to be impertinent, and he's really devoted to us. Seen a lot of Mary Hastings?"

"Not very much—somehow."

"Pshaw! I love to have you see her."

A momentary vision of the famous Mrs. Hastings arose before his mind's eye. Her beauty was real joy to him. He had always proclaimed that she was the most beautiful woman in the world. She was Diana's closest friend; she had a splendid influence on Diana, and it hurt him to think that they had not been seeing very much of each other.

And Tam Talks

And now the hack which they had hired turned into the short shady driveway that led to their house. And he spoke no more. Before the hack had stopped he was out of it, abandoning Diana and the luggage. He tore open the front door and rushed into the hall, crying: Tam!—Tam!—Tam!"

And there came a rush of little feet and a shrill voice, crying "My Fazzer! My Fazzer!" And then they were in each other's arms, and somehow it could be seen that they were one flesh, one blood, one heart, one soul, and that God had made them for each other.

Neither Diana nor her mother, who had come out of the library where she had been trying to keep Tam quiet, looked at them. For there was a kind of holiness about their rapture which it was not fitting for mortal eyes to behold.

And then he was sitting, and had Tam astride of his knees facing him, and their eyes glistened very brightly with delight. He had demanded that she tell him everything that she had been doing, but because for her the Winter had had but one tremendously important event it was about that that she told him.

"Once," she said, "Muzzer took me to town to spend the night. And Mr. Fenn took us to the Hippodrome, and there was a giant and a dwarve and stayed up till the middle of the night!"

Something of Manners' gladness went right out of him.

"Oh, Diana," he cried, "how could you? I'm so disappointed."

"Tam was so crazy to go," said Diana. "She talked of nothing else."

"But she can only go to the theatre for the first time in her life—once," said Manners, "and I did so want to be there that time. Who," he asked, with the least trace of temper in his voice, "is the Mr. Fenn who comes along and gobbles up my privileges?"

"He's awful nice," said Tam, "'n he can blow wings."

But Manners had forgotten Fenn and the Hippodrome, and his disappointment, and with an "Oh, my darling!" he had once more clasped his little daughter to his breast.

Between kissing Tam good-night and dinner time there was half an hour during which Manners and his mother-in-law sat in front of the library fire and talked about Diana.

At night, at a little distance,

Diana's coldness rouses her husband to demand an explanation of her altered attitude

Mrs. Langham was still beautiful. Her back was perfectly straight and her small head was splendidly erect. The gray hair hardly showed against the light brown; she was slender and always becomingly dressed. Like Diana, she was slender and always becomingly dressed. Like Diana, she was extraordinarily neat. Manners had only one fault to find with his mother-in-law; she was almost wilfully inclined to indulge Tam and to spoil her.

"Diana seems to be dead beat," he said. "I do wish she wasn't so restless."

"It's the vice of her generation," said Mrs. Langham. "You suffer from it yourself, Frank."

"I keep it in bounds, and make it paint pictures."

"If Diana had only something to do. Restlessness is a symptom of idleness. And, like any bad habit, the more it's indulged in the worse it grows."

"She has something on her mind," said Manners. "Have you thought that? Something is troubling her. I've asked her to tell me what it is, but she says there's nothing." He laughed, but not mirthfully. "She'll tell me," he said, "when she gets good and ready, and not before."

An Unusual Attitude.

Mrs. Langham was devoted to her son-in-law. And all through the troubles that he had had with Diana she had felt herself to be entirely on his side. But she had been very careful not to show this by any word or act. She believed firmly that people who take sides openly or in any way interfere, as between husband and wife, are more apt to make matters worse than better.

She had a sense of justice which even the love of a mother for her daughter could not bias; and, in her judgment, Manners, all things considered, was an excellent husband, while Diana was by no means an excellent wife. During the first years of their marriage she had entertained the highest hopes of Diana. These hopes had diminished until, although still a part of her generous maternal faith, they were not untinged with cynicism.

According to her observations, very few women made really good wives until they had lost their looks. Their husbands were apt to have more love, then, she thought, and less care.

"You'd hate me," said Manners, "if I took her back to California with me."

"No. But I should decline absolutely to be responsible for Tam in the meanwhile. I have brought up five children of my own, thank you."

"I sometimes wish," said Manners, "that once in a while you had corrected one of your children with a rod."

"Poor Mr. Langham and I told you at the time that you were marrying a handful."

A smile of great sweetness stole over Manners' face. He rose and stood with his back to the fire, still smiling.

"And good Lord," he said, "how I still love her!"

It was at this moment that Diana apeared in the doorway. She had had a hot bath and looked refreshed.

Whether she had color or not made a great difference in Diana's looks. How bright and crisp her dark-brown hair was, and how charmingly she carried her head!

"I think dinner's ready," she said.

"If it is," said her husband, "then one thing is as sure as anything can be: I am going to dine with two extremely pretty women."

Husband's Battle to Keep Love of Fascinating But Fickle Wife

He had an arm for each of them and he hurried them, laughing and protesting, to the dining room.

Diana had very little to say. She announced, however, that she was dead tired and that she was going to bed right after dinner. Manners glanced at that bright brown head, and wondered for the hundredth time that day just what particular troubling thought it contained. If he had known his heart would have stood still.

Calm and Serene

Diana looked calm and serene. What would Manners have thought if she had yielded to the impulse which was urging her to leap to her feet, to throw down the candelstick, to smash glasses and to scream: "For God's sake, let me go! I want to die! I want to die!"

Dinner was short, but although Manners and Mrs. Langham kept up an energetic conversation, it passed slowly. Calm and serene though she seemed, Diana could not altogether deceive her mother and her husband; and she, equally versed in their moods and habits of mind, knew their talk and laughter for the pretense they were.

"The quicker I leave these young things together," thought Mrs. Langham, "to blow the clouds away or kiss they away, the better."

And shortly after dinner she wished them good-night upon a plea of letter-writing, and ascended to her room, humming gaily as she went. But there was no gaiety in her; neither did she write any letters.

For a long time now she had felt that she was living over a volcano. She could only hide this feeling from others. Alone in her own room the corners of her handsome, courageous mouth dropped. And it was an old woman who that night lay down at 12 o'clock in her narrow bed, and slept no wink till after 4.

"And I'm going up, too," said Diana, almost immediately after the sound had come to them of Mrs. Langham's door closing. "I suppose you'll be stopping in to say good-night to me?"

She met his look bravely, and even waved to him from the stair. He could not know that when she had closed the door of her room she dropped on her knees by the bed and began to sob like a broken-hearted child.

There was still so much of the child in Diana that she cried all the time she was undressing and looping up her hair for the night, and after she had washed her face with cold water she cried some more, and had to wash it again.

From her prayers she rose, not with placidity and resignation in her face, but with resentment. Of the short-lived look of refreshedness that had followed her hot bath there was no longer any trace. There were dark circles under her eyes and she looked haggard.

A Sudden Fear

Her husband came to her presently in his pajamas and a long wrapper of white toweling. He seated himself on the edge of the bed and took both her hands in his. He looked into her eyes a long time, and it seemed to him that in their blue depths he could detect fear and animosity. The beating of his heart became less emphatic.

Diana, dear," he said, "you are fond of me, aren't you?"

"I don't think you know how fond of you I am," she said.

He leaned over her and slid his left arm under her shoulders. In his right hand he still held both of hers.

"Diana, darling," he said, "doesn't it make any difference that I love you with my whole heart and soul?"

"It makes a lot of difference, Frank."

He loosed her hands and took her altogether in his arms. His face dropped to hers, but she turned hers away, so that it was her cheek that he kissed, and in the same instant of time he knew that she had begun to cry.

Francis Manners had his great moments, and the passion that shook him turned, as at the touch of a magician's wand, into pity and chivalry. He rubbed his cheek against hers, and almost in his natural voice he said:

"I know how tired you are, darling. I'm only saying good-night."

In tomorrow's instalment of "The Wild Goose" Francis demands that Diana confide her troubles to him. How she avoids it is cleverly told.

FOR LOVE

An Absorbing Romance By Ruby M. Ayres

"LET him go. Why should we try to prevent him if he wants to go?"

"It's your whole life's happiness. You can't throw it away for what may be just a misunderstanding. Philip's a good fellow. I've known him longer than you have, and I beg of you—for your own sake . . ."

She dragged her hand away.

"It's no good. I've done everything I can. I can't be hurt and humiliated any more. Oh, it's all very fine for you to talk. You don't know what it's all been. You heard what Mr. Faulkner said—that Philip is in town. He hasn't troubled to come and see me—he won't trouble. . . . It's finished and done with, and perhaps when he has really gone I shall be able to begin to forget him." She drew a long breath. "I mean to try—I must try."

"Let me speak to him. We've been friends for years. Let me say something to try and put matters right—I implore you!"

She turned her eyes to his pleading face.

"You would only add to my humiliation. No, no—there's no chance that it is just a misunderstanding . . . We've just got to let things go. We can't stop him—it's too late."

"Philip may have heard that we have been seen about together a great deal; he may be jealous."

She laughed at that.

"That was my hope—but it's dead now—quite dead! I don't believe it ever really existed."

"I shall always be your friend," he told her with an effort. "But there are some things in which not even a friend can help you. Go down to the country, my dear—don't let you put him in the wrong; don't give him an excuse to blame you—any more."

"You mean that he will blame me—for these last ten days?" She laughed. "I don't care if he does—I dont care what he says or thinks—"

There was a little silence, then Calligan said sadly:

"The mere fact of your saying that disproves your words, dear."

She leaned back, her hands clasped in her lap.

"I'm going to tell you something now," she said, and her voice was suddenly quiet. "I'm going to tell you—the whole truth!"

She waited a moment, but he did not speak. "I can trust you, I know, trust you never to tell anyone. I shouldn't be telling you, —only if I don't you'll go away and leave me too, as—as Philip has—and I couldn't bear it. . . . Well—well . . . Philip married me because his father had lost all his money, and they were on the verge of ruin; he married me for my money—to save his father. I didn't know at the time—he didn't tell me."

Her voice was dully monotonous, as if she was past feeling or caring. "Just—just after we—came back—from church."

She looked at Calligan, but he sat motionless, and she went on:

"I nearly went mad—at first, but afterwards . . ." She made a passionate gesture. "Oh, can't you see now that there's no hope! No hope at all? It isn't Philip's fault; he can't make himself care for me. He married me to save his father——"

She laughed. "We need not have been in such a hurry, need we? Mr. Winterdick only lived three days after the wedding."

She drew a long breath.

"So now—now I've told you everything, you won't ask me to give him any more chances, will you? It's—it's just as embarrassing for him when I try to be nice to him as it's—it's painful to me . . . He's done his best—the first day he really did his best. He said that he loved me—he begged me to believe it—and for a moment . . . well, just for a momen. I almost did . . . I'm so glad that I didn't quite give way—after all . . ."

Calligan did not speak, and presently she touched his arm gently.

"Well?" she asked. "You're not going to tell me to go down there now, are you?"

He roused himself with an effort.

"I am—more than ever," he said firmly. "You must go! It's the only way left—can't you see it?"

"I can see anything except that Philip doesn't want me, and that he wants to get away from me." She broke down into bitter weeping. "Oh, there isn't anybody in all the world who cares for me,' she said sobbing.

Calligan did not move; his hands were clenched and he had almost bitten his lip to try and control himself.

Presently, when she was quieter, he said evenly:

"You mustn't talk like that. Things are never so bad for any of us but that they might be worse. Come now"—he took her hand and patted it comfortingly — "promise me that you will go down to the country tomorrow."

"I can't leave Peter."

"Peter can go with you, or stay here and look after himself."

"I don't want to go."

"We never want to do what is our duty. I'm not trying to preach to you, God knows, but—it's for—for both our sakes."

Something in his voice arrested her attention. She looked at him quickly. It was too dark in the taxi to see his face at all clearly, but they were just passing a street lamp, and its yellow light shone in through the window, and for a second she had a glimpse of Calligan's face—white and strained, with hopeless eyes.

Twice she tried to speak, but could find no words, then at last she said almost in a whisper—

"Very well—if—if I go, will you—will you promise me something!"

"Yes."

"That if—if I want you—if I—if I can't go on with it, if I have to send for you—or—or come back——you won't send me back to him again—will you promise me that?"

"On my word of honor."

She drew back a little.

"Very well, then I will go."

"Thank you, dear."

They had reached the apartments, and Calligan opened the door and got out; he avoided looking at Eva.

The taxicab had rolled away into the darkness before he spoke.

"Good night—and God bless you."

She tried to answer him, but could find no words, and the next moment he was walking away down the street.

The Beautiful Women of History Gave Much Time to the Improvement of Their Complexion.

It is said that the most beautiful women of history are the ones that spent most of their time in the cultivation, improvement and prolonging the life of their beauty. They used all safe means they could find to accomplish this charm.

BLACK AND WHITE BEAUTY BLEACH

will remove skin blemishes, such as tan, sun and wind freckles, blotches, liver spots. It will clear your complexion, make your skin soft and youthful.

Black and White Bleach is a delightfully perfumed, pink-tinted cold cream compound, approved and used by particular women. It will not grow hair on the face, and when applied forms an invisible coating on the skin.

Black and White Soap should always be used with Black and White Beauty Bleach. Its regular use will keep the skin in perfect condition.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle.

Copyright, 1921, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"MAY'BE I'd better take the papers up there as soon as they're ready," I countered, and then, under the kindly scrutiny of Pat's eyes, the burst from me:

"It isn't a man; it's a woman. There's a Miss Storrs in charge of Jim's office. I'd rather take the papers up to her—go over the matter alone with her."

"Of course,' dear. I'll hustle the documents right along for you," said Pat.

I had no way of telling whether he accepted the idea of a woman in charge of Jim's affairs as a matter of course, or if he felt it tactful to avoid comment.

Just as he got to the door, it opened, and in walked Neal.

Neal's Greeting

"Hello, Babbsie!" was Neal's greeting as he came into Pat's sanctum from his own part of the office. His matter-of-course tone indicated that he'd been back in town long enough to feel natural in harness again.

"Hello, Neal! You act as if you'd seen me at the breakfast table. When did you get back?" I began in an aggrieved tone that melted before Neal's smile and hug to an "Oh, you darling, I am glad to see you!"

"Pat's been on your trail all morning," said Neal, perching cozily on the arm of my chair and flinging a protecting arm about my shoulders. "This is some offer Carlotta pulled down out of the sky. Of course, you'll let the apartment go. You can camp with me until Jimmie gets back—or roost at Jeanie's if you like that better than my two by four. And even when Jim does return"—

Neal's voice trailed off and he swung from the chair arm to stand in front of me, slim and boyish in figure, but with a man's deep concern in his steady voice.

"Babbsie, isn't there something about this trip of Jim's you'd like to talk over with me? If there's anything you'd like done—or just anything you'd like to dope out by thinking aloud, won't you trust me? I'd go through fire for you, Babbs, or to the North Pole——"

"Just go on loving me, dear," I broke in.

Neal eyed me for a moment before he replied:

"You've got a regular 'cello quiver in your voice today, Babbs. All upset about taking such a chunk of pirate gold for the apartment, aren't you?"

"Yes, sir." I smiled back at him, brushing away a wee bit of mist that hadn't come entirely because of my own troubles. Then I added: 'Neal, I've an appointment to lunch with Father Andrew this noon—he's back, you know?"

"Say, that's great! Gee! to think I didn't know," gasped Neal.

"He's here," I said vaguely, trying to think up a way to prevent Neal from going in my place to the luncheon I'd have to omit in order to go up and have certain matters out with Miss Storrs. "I was to lunch with him, and now I can't on account of the lease."

Divided Heart

"Well, Phoebe and I will go in your place. I phoned my little girl from the station and she's on her way in from Dreamwold now—so I'll have to offer father a divided heart."

"He won't be able to meet you," I asserted. "He has a business appointment with a friend of mine. Please, dear, don't go. He'll understand that it's for my sake"——

"Secrets already," railled Neal. "Well, I said I'd be a good sport about being left out in the cold, but when will you permit me to see that precious old daddy of mine?

"Let's see," I mused, covering my real need of planning with a moc kair of grave importance. Then in a moment I had it.

"The folks who are taking my apartment want to get in by day after tomorrow. So I'll have to trot up this afternoon and take an informal inventory and get out the most personal of my possessions. If you and Father Andrew could help me"—— I began and then stopped short.

It would be the most natural thing in the world for Neal to volunteer Phoebe's services, too. And she mustn't be there. Father Andrew and I would tell Neal what he had to know, but the boy would want to be alone with Phoebe when he broke the ugly tidings to her. If Phoebe stood by the full glory of that was Neal's. And if she failed him he couldn't endure to take this blow even under the loving scrutiny of our eyes. But Neal broke in eagerly on my sentence, allowing me no chance for retreat:

"Great! I'll be there and I'll bet you can bank on that father of mine. I'd offer Phoebe's services too, but I happen to know she has a long list of fittings and junk like that."

"All right! Then I'll be the only Harrison present," I said. "And now to telephone Father Andrew while you're here to speak to him, too. Run along and hurry Pat a bit with the documents, will you, dear, while I'm putting the call through?"

To Be Continued.

That Ended It

Friend: How long did they regard you as a hero after you returned home? Returned Soldier: Until I tried to get a job.

Done With It

He: "Do you think you could grow to love me " She: "I'm afraid not; you see, I've done growing."

Street Railway Trustees Assuming Serious Responsibility

The trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway are assuming a very serious responsibility if, by refusing to renew the contract under which the road has been operated by the men during the last year and by refusing to arbitrate the issues raised by their refusal to renew the contract, they precipitate a strike and a paralysis of the whole eastern part of the commonwealth.

The men are willing to arbitrate. Arbitration is the accepted method of securing and maintaining peace in this situation. The men want to arbitrate and the trustees decline.

If Governor Cox wants peace rather than to put the men in a bad position before public opinion, he ought to address himself to the trustees rather than to the men.

Gambling at Boxing Bouts

The Boxing Commission of Massachusetts held an investigation of the charges of unfair decision and improper influences to secure it, in the boxing bout between "Young Montreal" and "Pete Herman," held at the Boston Arena on the night of April 15th last.

It appeared in the testimony at this investigation that gambling was openly carried on without the least let or hindrance at the boxing match. Of course, this violates the law and offends a great many people, who, in deference to the advantages of boxing in the direction of its stimulation of manly exercises for the sake of health, have somewhat doubtfully consented to legalizing boxing under strict regulation.

The lure of gambling is always strong in human nature which constantly craves for some kind of excitement, but it is an unmixed evil, nevertheless, and one which our churches have wisely condemned. Hence if we have to sacrifice boxing in order to suppress open gambling at the boxing matches, it will be sacrificed. This would be a pity, for boxing has many great attractions and advantages, and a great majority of the people who attend the boxing matches like it for the good red blood that is in it and the health stimulus that it gives, and not for the unnatural, narcotic influence which is in its evil and illegal by-product—gambling.

We call the attention of the Boxing Commission and of the State police to this situation.

How Directors Neglect Duty

A director of a certain bank was asked if he had approved a certain very large and disastrous loan. He replied that he had not. He was then asked if he was not a director at the time the loan was made and he replied that he was a director, but that he had not attended a meeting of the board of directors for several years.

Can anyone imagine a member of a City Council, or of a Legislature, or of Congress, or of a court, or of a public commission, or any other public officer being in good health and not absent on account of other public business, being absent for two years from his duties! The thing is unimaginable. It simply is not done in the public service. But it is not at all unusual in our private corporations.

If our voters neglected their duty to inform themselves on the issues of the elections and on the personalities of the candidates as the stockholders of our railroads, street railways, gas and electric light companies neglected their duty in these regards, we should have a monarchy or a dictatorship in this country in no time at all and the whole land would reek with corruption and scandal. Yet this is the way our big private corporations are managed.

The public are gradually learning the fact and are increasingly careful about investing their money in them. Human nature makes it very unsafe for men to handle other people's property when the people who own the property never pay any attention to its management. This is one of the reasons why the railroads of the country are sunk in the depths of insolvency from which they can never be lifted, except by the strong arms of the government.

Erin's Fight Non-Sectarian

Rev. William Harman van Allen, rector of the Advent Church in Boston, writes a letter to one of our Boston newspapers in which he quotes Bishop Cohalan's denunciation of the attempt of the Irish Republican Parliament to declare Ireland an independent republic and his denunciation of the right by the Irish to use physical force in the establishment of their independence, and the denunciation by Cardinal Logue of the warfare waged by the Irish Republican Army as "not an act of war, but plain murder." He also quotes another distinguished gentleman to the same effect.

We are glad that Dr. van Allen, who is, as he has a perfect right to be if he chooses, a very ardent English propagandist in this country, sees fit to utilize such distinguished Catholic authority in Ireland against the cause of the Irish people. But, Dr. van Allen and his associates must be consistent. They must not quote Catholic authority against the Irish and then secretly spread around among the Protestant clergymen in this country the idea that Ireland's efforts to be free are really the efforts of the Catholic church to oppress a very small, helpless Protestant minority. Both cannot be true.

As a matter of fact, neither is true. The heroic struggles of Ireland to be free have been neither Catholic nor Protestant movements. The struggle has gone on for nearly 150 years and the number of those who died on the scaffold and in exile probably exceeds the casualties in the battle for liberty anywhere else in the world—and until four years ago those who died on the scaffold were nearly all Protestants.

Like Americans, Irishmen do not take political dictation from their church. It was one of Ireland's greatest sons who said that he took his religion from Rome, but not his politics. The overwhelming sentiment of the Irish people at that time ratified his statement and the attitude of the Irish people toward Bishop Cohalan's and Cardinal Logue's declaration shows that they have steadily preserved the distinction between religion and politics during the more than 100 years which have intervened.

MEN WHO DESERT THEIR WIVES

Nellie Bly Shows Suffering of Women and Children Who Are Suddenly and Unexpectedly Left Without Support and Must Beg Charity

By Nellie Bly

I WISH I could understand the man who deserts his wife.

I should like to know the workings of his mind and emotions. I would like to realize how he manages to arrive at a condition which permits him to abandon his wife and little helpless children.

Do such men care whether the children starve or the wife dies? Or are they callous and indifferent to the fate of the little babes to whom they gave life and the wives they have vowed to cherish and protect?

It is not uncommon for women to desert husbands. For all sorts of reasons women leave their homes and children. It is generally because they have fallen in love with another man, though often, for unexplained reasons, they become tired of their husbands and children and shake off home ties to go out into the world to try a life of freedom and to support themselves by their own exertion. The woman who deserts generally does it for the love of finery and excitement, and what she believes will be a more tempting life. She may pretend a great love for the man who leads her astray, but that love is merely pretense and sham. It is what he offers her that tempts.

Not Hopeless

But in such cases the family, while wretched, is not hopeless. The deserted man for a time will have the difficulty that all widowers experience in finding a competent, fine and efficient housekeeper. But the man is the wage-earner and the supporter, and the desertion of his wife does not in any way interfere with the living and the money to support the babies.

With the deserted wife it is different. When the father walks out the weekly income stops. A wife with a lot of children cannot at a sudden break go out into the world and find work with sufficient wages to support herself and family. Besides, she cannot leave her children alone. And for a housewife suddenly to be able to earn wages enough to support her family and pay a housekeeper, is among the impossibilities.

A handsome woman, tall, refined and neatly clad, came to see me the other day. She had pretty brown eyes, an enticing dimple in her cheek, and presented every indication of being genteel, well-raised and accustomed to life above the ordinary.

Nine years ago she married, and with her husband, went to New York. They lived a happy life together. He was a devoted husband and steadily employed. They longed for children, but none came to them until they had been married four years. Then they had a little girl, a beautiful child who was their pride and joy.

Five more years rolled on and bad luck came. The husband lost his position, and try where he would, he failed to obtain a new one. He was discouraged and desperate, but the wife kept cheering him along, telling him ill luck could not last forever.

Then came the knowledge that they were to have what they always longed for, a second child. In spite of his ill luck he was for the time overjoyed at the news.

On Thanksgiving Day they had very little to eat. All their money was gone. And kissing his wife and baby daughter, he started out on his usual quest for work.

He never came back. The wife waited awake the entire night expecting him every minute. She waited the next day. And then, as there was nothing to eat in the house, and as she and the child had to live, she herself set forth in search for work.

She found work in a factory. It was hard and difficult at first; well-nigh impossible. Only desperation helped her to endure the unaccustomed surroundings and the labor. But pluck and a superior intelligence were hers. Before long her foreman gave her a higher position. She was able to earn sufficient to support herself and child and to clothe them. She could not have luxuries, nor could she get sufficient ahead to enable her to rent rooms and furnish them. But she could pay her boarding and room rent and clothe herself and child.

But she was handicapped. What she and her husband had welcomed with such joy was now a load upon her. She was to become a mother, and she was helpless. The moment she would stop work her wages would stop, and that meant no food or shelter for herself and little girl.

She came to me in tears and despair. She was facing a proposition, which, with all her bravery, she knew she could not conquer. She could not work any longer. She had nowhere to go for the birth of her child.

I urged her to return to the home of her girlhood in another State. But her pride and the shame of being deserted prevented it. Finally, she took my advice and sent her little girl back home to her mother. A generous and benevolent woman of New Jersey agreed to keep her for a few weeks at her home. And a hospital agreed to take her in and care for her during childbirth.

Can anyone imagine what was in the brain and the heart of that husband and father who deserted?

Another Deserted Mother

The other morning a little, worn creature in poor and dishevelled clothes came to see me. She carried in her arms a yellow-haired girl a year and a half old dressed in a worn and ragged blue teddy bear suit. Hanging to her skirts was a little three-year-old girl.

Last September her husband, who had been out of work for a long time, walked out one morning and never came back. She was penniless and desperate. Each day she sold a piece of her furniture or some garment she could spare to get food for herself and the children. She couldn't go to work and leave her two babies. And it wasn't very long until there was no furniture left to sell.

She went around to all the charities. In one she was told if she came there daily and sat in a row with other poor women she might get an opportunity to go to work in some household where she would receive her food for her labor. But, she was told, one of her children would have to be put in an institution, as no family would take a woman with two. Meanwhile, no money could be advanced. She must provide for herself waiting for this chance work.

She came to me, and we had a long serious talk. The little thing is brave, but yet the tears came into those blue, blue eyes. She begged me to take her two little babies and give them in adoption.

The Salvation Army kindly took the mother and her little babies in for a two-days' shelter. And a hospital has most generously offered to take the little mother and care for her in the hospital when her baby is born.

Now, who wants these two little children; two lovely little girls? Only some one who owns his own home and who has sufficient money to give these children every comfort and to educate them can have them. And I would like best of all to find a family who would take not only the two little sisters but the child that is to be born. Surely, in one of all the child-lonely rich homes there will be a place for these little ones and a father and mother who will love and adore them.

The Harp's Song

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

ALL day, all day in a calm like death
The harp hung waiting the sea wind's breath.

When the western sky flushed red with shame
At the sun's bold kiss, the sea wind came.

Said the harp to the breeze, Oh, breathe as soft
As the ringdove coos from its nest aloft.

I am full of a song that mothers croon
When their wee ones tire of their play at noon.

Though a harp may feel, 'tis a silent thing
Till the breeze arises and bids it sing.

Said the wind to the harp, Nay, sing for me
The wail of the dead that are lost at sea.

I caught their cry as I came along
And I hurried to find you and teach you the song.

Oh, the heart is the harp, and love is the breeze,
And the song is ever what love may please.

WHY AIRSHIP IS LIMITED AS TO ITS ASCENT

By Garrett P. Serviss

"It is my understanding that the height of the atmosphere is 100 miles, and 200 miles in an extremely attenuated form. My question follows: Assuming that an airship ascended this height, what would happen to it after it had reached the vacuum?—J. W., Chicago."

IT could go no higher. Whether by "airship" you mean a balloon or an aeroplane the answer is the same, for both balloon and aeroplane depend for their ascensional power upon the pressure of the atmosphere, so that without air neither of them could rise from the ground.

The difference between them is that, while the balloon is kept afloat without exerting any force, being buoyed up by the pressure of the surrounding air as a ship is buoyed up by the pressure of water, the aeroplane has to exert force, the reaction of which upon the air causes the machine to move in a direction compounded of the vertical and the horizontal.

Cannot Rise Straight

An aeroplane, except of the helicopter type, cannot rise straight upward, as a balloon will do in calm air. It must be driven at a sloping incidence through the air, so that a certain proportion of the force is exerted upward, or becomes a vertical component.

There seems to be a widespread misapprehension on this subject, for questions are often asked based upon the notion that if sufficient driving power could be given to an aeroplane it might travel to the moon. Often the querists assume that getting out of the atmosphere would be an advantage to the aeroplane on account of the cessation of resistance. But an aeroplane could no more travel in vacuuous space than could a balloon.

A Prime Necessity

The presence of air is a sine qua non for both. Without that neither possesses any means of overcoming gravity. Projectile force alone (if we exclude electric repulsion) is able to overcome gravity. If there were a fixed upper limit, or true surface, to the atmosphere, then we could imagine a balloon, or an aeroplane leaping a little above that surface under the impulse of a swift rush, but it would be the projectile force developed by the airship's rapid rise that enabled it to make the leap, and as no more force could be accumulated after it got out of the atmosphere, while that which it had would be steadily exhausted by the backward pull of gravity, in a little while it would come to rest and then fall back into the air.

MILLIONAIRE IN OVERALLS TEACHES LESSON

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

MOST of our American millionaires had modest beginnings, and at least some of them remain humble in name and circumstance.

The war started a veritable mushroom growth of millionaires. Some of these war monsters have gone as quickly as they came. Others have, in that era of forced and false prosperity, developed tastes, appetites and habits which, in the days of relative famine that have quickly followed, they will not be able to maintain and satisfy. Hence the tears which the momentarily wealthy are adding to the murkiness and gloom of the post-war period.

But there are others! As, for instance, a millionaire in overalls, of whom we learned in Massachusetts recently, when his death revealed the man's remarkable life.

They say that it is only three generations from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves. The same holds true, doubtless, of overalls.

Of Humble Origin

A man of humble origin, financially measured, manages to acquire a fortune. His son, untrained in the care and use of money, is likely to live a fairly worthless life. His grandson, worth still less—humanely measured—loses all and returns to the struggle for existence. And so the shirtsleeve-to-shirtsleeve story is rounded out.

Some day, not far distant, society will prevent the disease of hereditary wealth by the most drastic inheritance taxation. Then we all shall have the advantage of being born fairly poor, and none will be handicapped by starting life as the son or daughter of a rich father.

And the joy of the working will be a privilege vouchsafed to all.

About the Massachusetts millionaire in overalls. Here he is, in his proper person, with a clearly enough New England name to let you hear the Yankee twang—Jonathan Maynard Parmenter of Wayland, Mass.

He was a farmer and cattle drover. Wonder of wonders, in these days of movies and moving, he died in the house in which he was born, having lived there all his eighty-nine years! And—would you believe it?—he never owned an automobile, not even a Farmyard "Hennery"! Stingy? No! but he simply didn't care to be inconvenienced by the modern contrivances which we mistake for civilization.

Yes, he did put in a telephone. But that was about the only concession he made to modernity, unyielding otherwise to the mania for "improvements." As partial compensation for that neglect, he developed traditional agricultural orthodoxies, in that he went to bed early and rose early and—as the sequel proves—he became, by that process, healthy—wealthy—and wise.

We must not neglect to add that he cultivated, among his personal crops, such homely virtues as regularity and temperance, frugality, industry, shrewdness and patience.

Town Wondered

Apparently, the neighbors did not know the kind of a worthy farmer they had among them, for the town woke up in wonder when they found that Jonathan Parmenter had died worth one million and a quarter and (strange, but they all leave it!) leaving a half million of it to the little town of Wayland!

Now, don't all rush out to the suburbs to find an abandoned farm. And don't begin to pester Uncle Sam for 160 free acres. A million is not to be found by settling on a farm. It is in the earth, to be sure, but must be worked for and earned.

Besides, our millionaire farmer, who died with his overalls on, as it were, won his wealth by more than mere farming. It appears that he and his brother were shrewd and thrifty, unafraid of work, and wise. They did not mind drudgery and monotony. They raised crops and sold them, bought and bred cattle, made each dollar, too, breed another—and then some.
